Truman Calls On Industry For Increase In Capacity

Urgency Stressed; He Asks End of Fear Of 'Overexpansion', Sees Long-Term Need

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

American industry must banish fears of "overexpansion" and begin at once to increase production capacity in many lines needed for the enlarged defense program, President Truman and his Council of Economic Advisers told Congress yesterday.

The repeated emphasis on the need for more production equipment to meet military requirements was the outstanding feature of Mr. Truman's midyear and economic report and the council's accompanying review, both sent to the Capitol yesterday.

Much of the rest of the documents, totaling 160 pages, was repetition and analysis of the themes the President has stressed in tax and control messages of the past two weeks. And throughout both reports was the underlying and repeated concern with the prospect of inflation.

Can Be Avoided, He Says

Inflation can be avoided, the President argued, and the present rearmament program can be handled without all-out direct controls—price and wage controls and consumer rationing—provided the Congress grants the taxes and regulatory measures already requested, and provided consumers, business and labor exercise moderation and restraint.

But these "provideds"—the "ifs" in the situation—seemed so numerous and so dubious, as the reports pictured them, that it looked almost as if the President himself were not betting too heavily on the prospect of no further controls.

"If it should become necessary," Mr. Truman said in his report, "I shall without hesitation ask the Congress for . . . complete economic mobilization or for further intermediate action depending on the need."

In its report, the Council of Economic Advisers used even stronger language:

"The recent upsurge of prices and advanced buying indicates how quickly we can pass over into a dangerously inflationary situation.

"The appropriate agencies of Citizens' Jobs for Defense

Here is a summary of President Truman's advice to different groups in the Nation, in his mid-year economic report, on what is needed from them for the defense program:

TO CONSUMERS: "Some sacrifice (of domestic consumption) is called for . . . The best rule to follow is to buy normally. The current outlook is that serious shortages of consumer goods will not develop, unless they are created artificially by speculative or panicky acquisition of goods far in excess of actual need . . . (We must) refrain from hoarding or avarice."

TO INDUSTRY: "The expansion of certain types of production, which is now doubly urgent, should not be held back by fears that capacity would become excessive . . . Further adjustment of capacity and investment to current and foreseeable conditions, combined with restrained pricing . . . can give us the volume and kinds of production which the Nation needs. This is more essential now than ever before."

TO LABOR: "Labor should continue and enlarge its contribution toward increasing productivity . . .

"Wage demands of a character which might lead to another inflationary spiral should be avoided.

"Above all, labor should join with management in the further consolidation of industrial peace. Work stoppages in vital industries are something we simply cannot afford under current conditions."

Baruch Calls for Rationing, Tax Hike, Wage-Price Control

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Bernard M. Baruch urged Congress yesterday to shoot the works in mobilizing the Nation's economy by voting for rationing and controls on prices and wages.

He said that, if possible, prices ought to be rolled back to what they were on June 25, the day the North Korean army struck.

Baruch, called "Dr. Facts" by Woodrow Wilson and described as America's "greatest prophet" yesterday by Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), testified before the Senate Banking Committee on the Administration's bill for economic controls. The bill does not provide for rationing authority or controls on prices and wages.

Baruch said President Truman had not gone far enough, either in asking for powers or in recommending higher taxes. He said that he himself would organize for "all-out mobilization" and make taxes "higher than a cat's back"—high enough, at least, to raise 10 billion dollars, twice what Mr. Truman asked for. He said he also favored a "mobilizing agency."

He emphasized that the world crisis was far bigger than Korea, and warned that the United States was lagging in its armament race with Russia. If war came, he said, there would be no time to prepare, because there was no ally to hold the line now and because the ocean was no longer a rampart.

"We are moving too slowly," he said. "When you lose, you lose once and for all."

The tall, white-haired financier, a spry 79, reminded Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) of what happened to ancient Rome when she grew soft. One of the things the Goths and Visigoths did when they descended on Rome, he recalled, was to "cut the heads off the Senators."

"I didn't mean to be personal," he remarked, amidst laughter.

He testified for about three

Two Brands Of Cigarettes Rise 1c a Pack

Camels, Cavaliers Jump After Half-Cent Wholesale Advance

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A jump in the price of two popular brands of cigarettes highlighted a day of general price increases yesterday.

Camel and Cavalier cigarettes will go up a cent a pack at retail today, after an increase of half a cent a pack wholesale by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., at noon yesterday. Other brands are expected to follow at once.

The day's long list of increases included such diversified items as rayon yarn, milk in several cities, rubber tile flooring, heavy fuel oil, and virtually all contracts on the commodity exchanges.

The Reynolds announcement was made in the face of complaints of Southern Maryland growers of cigarette tobacco about the lower prices their product is bringing as compared with last year. The Maryland leaf, virtually all of which goes into cigarettes, is selling for an average of $48.80 per 100 pounds this year, compared with $54.40 a year ago. The Maryland markets are the only tobacco markets now in full operation.

The Reynolds announcement said prices had been raised to $8 per 1000 from $7.75. There are 50 packs (20 cigarettes each) to each 1000. The wholesale increase amounts to five cents a carton.

Higher Tobacco Blamed

The company, according to the United Press, attributed the higher price to "increased costs, particularly in leaf tobacco."

P. Lorillard Co., maker of Old Golds, said it probably would follow suit. Liggett and Myers, makers of Chesterfields, refused to comment.

The Dun & Bradstreet Wholesale Food Price Index climbed to $6.49—eight cents above a week ago, and the highest since October 1948.

The Associated Press Index of Wholesale Commodity Prices reached its highest peak since September 28, 1948.

Standing out in the day's news were two movements against the trend. First, the Phillips-Jones Corporation announced it would guarantee prices of its Van Heusen

Sale of Television Station WOIC to WTOP Approved

The Federal Communication Commission yesterday authorized the sale of Washington television Station WOIC to WTOP, Inc., of Washington for $1,400,000.

WOIC now is owned by General Teleradio, Inc., subsidiary of R. H. Macy and Co., New York.

WTOP, Inc., operating Station WTOP, AM and FM., is owned 55 percent by The Washington Post and 45 percent by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The Macy Co. said it wants to give up the Washington video outlet to concentrate on development of Station WOR-TV in New York, and its affiliate standard Station WOR and WOR-FM.

FCC Chairman Wayne Coy, former radio executive for The Washington Post, abstained from participation in the case.

First Korea Casualties Flown Here

3 Wounded GIs Land at Bolling; Greeted by Korean Embassy Counselor

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

Three tired American soldiers were lowered from a transport plane at Bolling Base last night. They were the first victims of the Korean war to reach Washington.

The men were Pvt. Paul Jackson, 20, of Shelbyville, Mich., Corpl. Joseph Christian, 24, Piedmont, Ala., and Private First Class Thomas Merante, 19, of Hudson, N. Y.

With 15 other Army patients, they came gliding through the shifting clouds from Mobile, Ala., the last leg on the road back.

A knot of newspapermen stood by to ask them how it was over there, but a cautious Walter Reed doctor prevented that. The soldiers were eased into waiting ambulances and hustled off to the Army Medical Center.

A slightly-built man in a neat blue suit also stood by. As Jackson, the first to be lowered, reached ground level, he approached the litter.

After a few words, they smiled, shook hands. The blanket lay flat where Jackson's left leg should have bulged it.

The eyes of the slightly-built man glistened and the rims reddened. It was Sae Sun Kim, the counselor of the Korean Embassy.

Kim tried to shake hands also with Christian, the second man down. The wide-eyed soldier stared straight ahead, his lips drawn tight, his complexion ashen.

He had been in "a bad battle, and was badly shaken up," the doctor explained.

Merante came down last. He had dark hair, big eyes deep-sunken, and lashes a mile long. He, too, stared at first.

In a moment, Chaplain Norris T. Morton, Bolling's air evacuation chaplain, was at his side, saying, "We'll say a special prayer for you, son."

That did it. Merante broke into a smile, replied "I think I'll make the grade, sir." He greeted Kim affably and was off. Merante had a shrapnel wound in his left leg.

"It breaks my heart to see them,' said the Korean, rubbing his handkerchief across his eyes every few moments. "Myself and the Korean people will be grateful to you as long as we live."

With clouds cutting down visibility, the big C-54 arrived about a half-hour late.

For an hour before it broke the clouds the reception was primed down at the north end of the field. Newsreel men, Army wives, six khaki ambulances, Red Cross women with apple cake and milk, air policemen, and a big red fire-wagon were there.

With litter patients the fire wagon is a must.

"Bad to get 'em this far, and lose 'em," said a fireman.

Austin E. Lathrop, Richest Alaskan, Killed at Mine

Fairbanks, Alaska, July 26 (AP). Capt. Austin Eugene Lathrop, 84-year-old northern Alaska capitalist and publisher, was killed today when he slipped off a coal car and was crushed beneath the wheels.

He was Alaska's foremost industrialist and wealthiest man.

Reports from Lathrop's Healy River Coal Corp., holdings at Suntrana, some 112 miles south of here, said he had been bossing a work crew on a bridge and slipped and fell as he clambered aboard one of the coal cars being switched

He owned the Fairbanks Newsminer, five theaters, two radio stations, and held controlling interest in the Healy River Coal Corp.

He acquired the title of captain near the turn of the century when he piloted a 110-foot schooner, the L. J. Perry, in hauling goldseekers from gold rush to gold rush

Big Zoo Cats Act Like Kittens On Gift of Bushel of Catnip

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—A bushel of catnip was tossed into the lion house at the Brookfield Zoo yesterday. Minutes later, the animals had the place jumping.

It was Director Robert Bean's idea of throwing in the catnip—just to see if anything would happen.

The animals—lions, tigers, leopards—responded with an assortment of capers and catnip-ups that amazed even Bean.

They behaved like overgrown kittens. And, like cats, they appeared very fond of the catnip, the well-known, strong-scented herb.

Tommy, a 160-pound Indian leopard and regarded as dangerous, appeared to be trying to giggle. He sniffed the herb, rolled on it, and then staggered around drunkenly with a spray of catnip draped over one ear.

Two surly Bengal tigers, Prince and Duke, attempted tricks after taking a few whiffs of the catnip. Duke tried to stand on his head, right in the catnip.

Prince, leaning groggily in a corner, did setting-up exercises. He took another sniff of the catnip and offered to shake Bean's hands. Bean declined.

Draft Call Delinquents Face Penalties

Area Board Heads Eliminate Waiting Period for 'No-Shows'

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Selective Service directors of the District, Virginia and Maryland said yesterday that youths who fail to show up for their preliminary draft examinations without good cause will be penalized.

Those deliberately ducking the initial tests will be given them and—once called to active duty—will be inducted immediately without the usual 21-day waiting period, they said.

There were five "no-shows" at yesterday's second District call of 55 men to the Arlington Farms examining and induction center. On Monday, 16 failed to appear for the first local call.

Washington youths who fail to comply with a call to active duty will face prosecution by the District Attorney's Office, Frank D. Norton, deputy Selective Service director for the District, warned last night.

Machinery Unfamiliar

"Since the draft machinery still is unfamiliar to many," Norton said, "I think Washington men are responding very well. But of course we are disturbed by every man who doesn't answer our calls."

He said "no deliberate delin-

Larger Marine Corps Asked

Ten Air Groups Will Be Added; Fleet to Get 48 More Ships

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman's 10½-billion-dollar military expansion program will increase the Air Force from 48 to 58 groups by next July, USAF chiefs told Congress yesterday.

This was disclosed by members of Congress last night after Air Force Secretary Thomas K. Finletter testified before the House Armed Services Committee behind closed doors.

They said the boost of 10 operating groups is expected to be followed by a further enlargement later to 69 modern groups—instead of the 70 previously listed as the Air Force goal. But it was not clear whether this later expansion has the final approval of the Joint Chiefs, the Secretary of Defense and the President.

From the size of the plane procurement fund asked, however, it would seem that the bigger program is in view. The 4.3 billion aircraft and guided missile program proposed is well above what previously has been said was necessary for a peace-time build-up to 70 groups.

Naval Expansion Details

This disclosure of Air Force expansion plans followed an announcement by Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee of the scope of the naval increase in view and demands on Capitol Hill for an even greater boosting of American defense than asked by the President.

Vinson said three big aircraft carriers will be added to the Fleet under the Navy's share of the new budget. Forty-five other warships will join the forces afloat and naval manpower will be expanded by 204,000 officers and men, he told reporters.

In another development, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson appeared before a Senate committee to testify on the porgram. In what was obviously intended as an answer to critics, he declared that the Nation's fighting "potential" was greater when the trouble started in Korea than at any time since the postwar demobilization. Senate Backs Civil Defense Office Here

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate last night authorized the establishment of an Office of Civilian Defense for the District of Columbia.

Before adopting the measure, passed some time ago by the House, the Senate accepted three amendments proposed by Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.).

The amendments place all paid employes under Civil Service, provide for an FBI loyalty check on the staff and all employes, and require a report to Congress on the expenditure of funds.

Wherry's amendments were agreeable to Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), who introduced the measure for the District Committee.

Hunt added a fourth amendment. This provides for the appointment of retired Government employes to the civilian defense staff, from any branch of Government service, including the military.

The amendment provides that those named under it may serve either at their retirement pay or the salary fixed under the Classification Act, but not both. After service with the civilian defense, those appointed will be entitled to their regular retirement pay.

The Wherry amendment requiring reports to Congress stipulates that the director will report on all civil defense activities the first day of each regular session, as well as on expenditures.

Chiefs of Police Support Bill To Ban Slot Machine Shipment

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Chiefs of police in 293 big American cities "almost" unanimously favor the Senate-approved bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines.

The measure comes up before the House Interstate Commerce Committee at an executive session today. A month ago a vote to postpone consideration appeared to bury the bill but the indefinite congressional adjournment plans have given it another chance of passage.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath last night made public the vote by the police chiefs. He coupled it with a plea to Chairman Robert Crosser (D., Ohio), of the House committee for a favorable vote on the bill.

He also said he had been instructed to write Crosser by the executive continuing committee of the Attorney General's Conference on Crime which met here last February. The bill, as McGrath noted, was "one of the direct results" of that conference of State and local law enforcement officials.

"It is the feeling of this continuing committee that, after the extensive hearings conducted by your committee on this bill, sufficient evidence has been placed before you to determine that such a bill will go far to eliminate the evils at which it is so clearly pointed."

The Senate version of the bill some time ago was amended to apply specifically to the one-armed bandits whereas the original measure applied to all "gambling devices."

McGrath wrote Crosser that in conducting a survey of crime in the United States the International Association of Chiefs of Police recently asked members in 293 cities if they favored Federal legislation to keep the slots from crossing State lines. McGrath said that "the response to this question was almost unanimous." He added:

"It is apparent, therefore, that in the opinion of this association, S. 3357 (the Senate bill) . . . would be of inestimable assistance in combatting gambling in the United States."

Quorum to Be Problem

One of the House committee's problems today will be to get a quorum to consider the bill. It took more than an hour yesterday to round up a majority of the committee on another measure.

Representative John A. McGuire (D., Conn.), who a month ago made the successful motion to postpone action on the bill, told The Wash-

Navy Officer Routs Cancer, Senate Approves of Sea Duty

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

A Navy officer who, four years ago, was told that he had cancer and was going to die, got "unanimous consent" from the Senate yesterday to return to sea duty, probably in the Korean sector.

The strange and dramatic story of Lieut. Comdr. Edwin M. Rosenberg, 30, had its climax in the 10 seconds it took the upper house to pass Senate Bill 3446, with Rosenberg looking tensely on from the gallery. The bill now goes to the House.

The story began in 1946 in a room at the Naval Hospital in Boston, where Rosenberg had been sent for examination from the baby flattops he served on in the Pacific.

A doctor walked into the room to give the Annapolis officer the results of the examination. He gave his report straight from the shoulder.

"You have cancer," the doctor said. "You have—well, it's difficult to say, but maybe only two weeks to live. You had better get your affairs in order."

It was, ironically, April Fool's Day—but the doctor was not observing it.

Rosenberg remembers his re-

MacArthur Visits Front; Fresh Yanks Enter Fray

Invaders Make Some Gains in Deep South; Capture Sunchon, Move on Yosu Port

Tokyo, Thursday, July 27 (AP).—General MacArthur paid his second flying visit to the Korean war front today. He flew to U. S. Eighth Army headquarters. He is expected back this afternoon.

TOKYO, Thursday, July 27 (AP).—Allied forces today blunted a menacing North Korean thrust 70 miles west of the main Port of Pusan and stalled or shoved back the invader elsewhere on the 200-mile front.

General MacArthur's headquarters said the First Cavalry Division had made "slight withdrawals" east of Yongdong, 95 air miles northwest of Pusan. But these were only to strengthen hill positions.

Headquarters declared there had been no important change on the front in the last 24 hours. Field dispatches, however, told of U. S. and South Korean attacks both south and northeast of Yongdong.

U. S. troops, supported by jet fighters, were reported to have recaptured Hadong, high point in a south coast red thrust to within 70 miles of Pusan.

Another aerial onslaught was said to have aided South Koreans in driving the North Koreans back north of Hamchang, which is 35 air miles northeast of Yongdong.

It is on this sector of the front that the Reds have been exerting considerable pressure, trying to cut south behind the allied supply lines to the Yongdong front.

Pilots Report Retreat

An Eighth Army headquarters dispatch, said pilots reported North Koreans were in retreat north of Hamchang under a South Korean counter-attack, supported by a virtual parade of Allied planes.

"The Reds were pulling out on the left and right," said Lieut. John W. Planinac, of North Braddock, Pa., air control pilot.

Hamchang is 35 miles northeast of Yongdong.

MacArthur's headquarters said nothing about this South Korean attack. Apparently based on earlier information, its release

A communications center, apparently designed to be used as an emergency alternate for the Pentagon's nerve center, is to be built in the area of Camp Ritchie, Md.

Buy the Numbers, Count Off Ten— Big Billed-Up Fails

Baltimore, July 26 (AP).—A man charged with counterfeiting testified today that bogus $10 notes were used to pay off numbers bets.

The evidence came out at the arraignment of Alvin B. Brown, 32-year-old Baltimorean, on a counterfeiting charge.

Wesley D. Pettie, 24, booked on the same charge, said Brown gave him the bad bills and directed him to get them changed in taverns and stores so Brown could pay off some numbers bets.

Pettie said he did not know the bills were counterfeit. Brown was held in $15,000 bail for Federal grand jury action.

Enlistment 'Front' Business Is Brisk

By Veterans

Enlistment Of Non-Vet MDs Sought

A proposal to stimulate enlistment by non-veteran doctors has been put forth by a group of more than 300 physician veterans from the District.

Known as the Physician Veterans of World War II, the group on Monday night will officially ask the executive board of the District Medical Society to set up a special committee to administer the program.

The plan was adopted at a meeting of the group in the District Medical Society auditorium Monday.

It calls for the special committee to use "moral suasion" in getting active-duty volunteers from two groups of doctors.

These are doctors trained at Government expense "who in the opinion of the committee did not see sufficient active duty following their training; and those who saw no active duty at all."

The latter group should be encouraged to volunteer, according to the plan, "regardless of age, physical status and so-called essential positions."

The services have issued an emergency call for medical service volunteers, but there has been no official word on a draft.

This morning, Dr. Richard L. Meiling, Defense Department chief of medical services, will meet with American Dental Association's council on Federal government dental services, and with the AMA's council on hospitals and education.

Armed services recruiting offices in Washington and vicinity reported continued brisk business on the voluntary enlistment front yesterday.

The Army and Air Force interviewed 58 men from the District, Rockville, Md., and Charlottesville, Culpepper and Fredericksburg, Va. Eighteen were accepted by the Army, 11 by the Air Force and eight were held for further processing.

The Potomac River Naval Command signed up nine out of 19 applicants, in addition to swearing in 11 for enlisted duty in the regular Navy. Two men in the enlisted reserve also volunteered for active duty.

The Marine recruiting office had 16 applicants for the regular Marines of which it accepted three. Two 18-year-old District youths were sworn in and shipped out last night to Parris Island, S. C., boot camp. They were: John H. McNanee of 1956 Fendall ave. se. and Randolph C. Seay of 1004 E. Capitol st.

Among six former Marine sergeants reassigned to active duty yesterday were: William Van Hoesen, 220 Willow ave. and James E. Harrington, 5544 Eastern ave., both of Takoma Park, Md.; William L. Trest, 4607 3d pl. sw., and William A. Hollins of Lorton, Va.

With a big sendoff, Washington's Fifth Infantry Battalion, Marine Reserve, will entrain at Union Station at 5 p. m. Monday for Camp Lejeune, N. C., before joining Marine divisions in the field.

Led by the U. S. Marine Band and a drum and bugle corps, the group will parade from the Marine armory at 230 C st. nw. to the station via 3d st. nw., Constitution ave., the Capitol and then to the station. The parade will begin at 4 p. m.

In other local service developments, it was learned the Defense Department now is not granting blanket deferrments to police and firemen, but will consider them on an individual basis.

The Veterans' Administration yesterday reminded all persons drafted into the armed forces that they may obtain National Service Life Insurance. Officials said an increasing number of servicemen are taking out insurance on the belief they may be sent overseas.

Civil Rights Congress Aide Reports Attack

Jackson, Miss., July 26 (AP).—Aubrey Grossman of New York, organizational secretary of the Civil Rights Congress, reported to police he was beaten in his hotel room today.

Detective Paul Stribling said Grossman reported he was attacked by "five or six" men who piled into his hotel room after he answered a knock this afternoon.

Stribling said only a small cut was found on Grossman's forehead and that he did not appear seriously injured.

Grossman was chief spokesman for a Civil Rights Congress delegation which appeared before Gov. Fielding Wright here yesterday seeking a stay of execution for Willie McGee.

McGee, convicted three times on the same charge of raping a Laurel, Miss., housewife five years ago, was given a last-minute stay of execution by United States Supreme Court Justice Harold Burton in Washington today. McGee had been scheduled to die in the electric chair in Laurel Thursday.

Halifax, N. S., July 26 (AP).—Thieves boarded the freighter Menestheus here last night and stole three monkeys. They didn't bother two king cobras, two leopards and 20 pythons.

D. C. Corporal Missing in Korean Action

Defense Department casualty reports yesterday identified 14 killed in action, 6 wounded and 48 missing in the Korean fighting, including a 19-year-old District corporal.

Other area casualties reported were Pfc. Harold B. Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvan Richardson, of Clintwood, Va., killed in action; and Pvt. Raymond P. Waggy, son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Waggy of Mount Crawford, Va., listed as wounded.

Corpl. Cauthers

The report brought the number of identifications released here to 57 killed, 8 fatally wounded, 78 injured and 367 missing in action.

Listed as missing in action was Corpl. Robert E. Cauthers, son of Edward J. Cauthers of 814 G st. ne. He joined the Army at 17 after graduating from Stuart Junior High School.

Cauther's grandmother, Mrs. Nannie B. Ellington, who raised him after his mother's death when he was 8, said he was shipped to Japan in late 1948, after six weeks' training at Camp Croft, S. C.

There Cauthers became a member of the Thirty-fifth Infantry Regiment of the Twenty-fifth Infantry Division. A telegram Monday from the Defense Department was the first word she had that her grandson was in Korea.

Cauther's father reenlisted yesterday in the National Guard after receiving word that his son was missing. Cauther's brother, Edward John, jr., already is a member of the Marine reserves, and will report to Camp Lejeune for action Monday.

New 'USO' Meets Today On Expansion

Expansion of Washington-area activities of the Associated Services for the Armed Forces, successor to USO, will be planned at a meeting today of the ASAF citizens committee.

The meeting is set for 12:30 p. m. at the National Jewish Welfare Board office, 1637 Massachusetts ave., nw.

Joseph D. Kaufman, committee chairman, said the ASAF plans to seek more money from the Community Chest Federation in view of the Korean war and consequent enlargement of the armed forces.

Before outbreak of the Korean war, budget request of the ASAF for 1951 was $53,000, Kaufman said.

Round Trip, Japan to Korea, A Day in Wounded GI's Life

The Washington Post

FLOWN HERE—Pvt. Thomas Merante, 19, of Houdson, N. Y., wounded in action in Korea, has a word with Sae Sun Kim, Counselor of the Korean Embassy, who was on hand to greet the wounded GIs who arrived at Bolling Base yesterday

Pvt. First Class Thomas Merante, 19, of Hudson, N. Y., was one of the first three soldiers wounded in the Korean fighting to be brought to Washington yesterday. At Walter Reed Hospital last night he told this story:

"I can't tell you what outfit I was in. I can't even tell you the kind of gun we used. I'm an artilleryman.

"I've been stationed in Japan for the past 16 months. Went there right after basic training at Camp Pickett, Va.

Flown to Korea

"On June 29, four days after it began, they flew me to Suwon airfield in Korea, about 20 miles south of Seoul.

"As soon as we landed, they put my outfit at the south end of the field. First thing I did was dig a foxhole.

"Then they told me to take charge of the gun. That's a corporal's job, but I was supposed to make corporal this month. I guess I won't make it now.

"I was on it for about two hours, then my buddy relieved me so I could start makin' my tent. I was working on it right beside the gun when I heard that damn big explosion toward the east. Then we knew it was coming. It was four Yaks.

Bombs Begin To Drop

In a minute bombs were dropping all over, but they weren't hitting too good. I ran over to help load ammunition for my two buddies, but six South Koreans piled up against the gun. There was no other cover. It was an open field.

"I tripped over those South Koreans, fell in front of the gun. That's when that anti-personnel bomb hit me in the left knee. It got a South Korean in the arm.

"Three of the Koreans carried me back into the weeds to safety.

My buddies kept on firing and the outfit shot down two of the Yaks. The Air Force got in there and chased the other two away. It lasted about 15 minutes.

Back in Japan Same Day

"After the all clear, they carried me into an open field to the medics. They gave me morphine, put me in a plane, and I was back in Japan the same day I left.

"I don't care much about Korea, but I want to go back to Japan. My brother's there. Sergt. Antonio Merante, in the Air Force. He's 20.

"I feel funny being in the States with him in Japan, we've been together so long. We were supposed to come home this fall. We were gonna open a gas station in my home town. We don't want a career in the service.

"Was it worth it? Sure it was worth it—for my country."

Red Supplies, Towns, Tanks Hit by Planes

United States Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea (Thursday), July 27 (AP).—Land-based warplanes and carrier fighters in day and night strikes destroyed six enemy tanks and damaged 16 more behind the front yesterday.

An Air Force spokesman said the emphasis was on ground support in the 221 sorties, which struck at enemy troops and their lines of supply.

Yongdong, close to the main American positions 95 miles northwest of the port of Pusan, was attacked and fires were started, the spokesman said.

Fires also leaped up when other sky raiders hit the city of Taejon, 22 air miles northwest of Yongdong.

Bombs and rockets were rained on two other front supply centers, Kongju and Chochiwon, 30 and 28 miles, respectively, northwest of Yongdong.

An ammunition dump and four ammunition trucks were blown up at Tanyang, 40 air miles northeast of Youngdong.

Six night sorties, or individual flights, were aimed at Communist columns moving up to the front.

One Napalm-jelled gasoline firebomb raid on an enemy column was reported "effective."

BZ-26 light bombers also were in action. They hit a pontoon bridge near Seoul, the fallen South Korean capital, and destroyed fuel storage areas at Taejon, Kwangju and Inchon behind the front.

The claimed total for the day included 75 trucks destroyed, 67 trucks damaged, four field guns destroyed, one bridge destroyed and one damaged.

2 Plane Plants Cancel Leaves

By The Associated Press

Two Maryland aircraft plants, the Glen L. Martin Co. in Baltimore and the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp. in Hagerstown, have cancelled vacation shutdowns.

Most of Martin's 8700 employes, scheduled to go on two-week vacation Saturday, will remain on the job. Fairchild will operate "all divisions on which effective production on all priority items can be maintained," an official said.

Both plants have been asked by the Defense Department to continue operation.

Area Navy Reservists Shine In Florida Carrier Practice

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Pensacola, Fla., July 26.—Washington area men, to the number of 263, have spent the last week here proving to their own satisfaction that the Navy's Air Reserve is on it's toes.

These "weekend warriors," comprising the officers and men of the two fighter squadrons, one attack squadron and one service squadron based at Anacostia, operated from a carrier for the first time in their five-year history. None of their 52 pilots had landed on a carrier deck since the end of World War II. Two of them had never made a carrier landing.

In the first two days of their operations here from the light carrier Wright, they made a total of 168 abrupt and violent landings on the Wright's deck with only one minor mishap. Then they flew out to the Wright and operated from her for three more days over the placid Gulf of Mexico, banging away at targets on the water and dogfighting all over the place.

Capt. Albert N. Perkins, commanding the Wright, was all smiles after Fighting Squadron 663 had completed its first round of landings, and taxed them with sending in their best pilots for a proper start.

"These fellows," he said seriously after two days of landings and takeoffs at sea, "are good examples of what a man can do to keep in trim."

The squadrons were under overall command of Comdr. H. M. Amrine of 5225 Nebraska av. nw., an employe of the State Department's Office of Chinese Affairs.

Before attempting carrier landings, all pilots spent a week at the Pensacola Naval Air Base making uncounted landings in the orthodox carrier fashion under guidance of a landing signal officer. One pilot was eliminated during these dry runs.

Then, last Monday morning, while the Wright was steaming at 24 knots into a 12-mile wind, Fighter Squadron 663 came out from the beach and circled overhead in formation until given the signal to start landing. Its Grumman F6F's began peeling off and the first came sweeping round the ship's port quarter, just 150 feet above the water.

Its pilot got the signal to cut his throttle and the Gruman dropped to the deck with a rush and it's tail hook caught in the arrestor gear, dragging it to a jarring halt. There was a general craning of necks from the bridge and from the catwalks alongside the deck to identify its pilot.

He was Lieut. Charles C. Kellem of 726 S. Fayette st., Alexandria, manager of a paint store. His was the honor of making the first carrier landing ever credited to the present District area reserve squadrons.

Probably more interest was centered in the fortunes of Lieut. Don Ludwig of the Ludwig Photo Co., 2101 Wilson blvd., Arlington, who commands Fighter Squadron 664 but who finished the flight course at Pensacola just after the war, too late to qualify as a carrier pilot. He made his first carrier landing Monday and more than justified the good wishes of his shipmates.

The only other pilot who made his first carrier landing during this cruise was Lieut. P. M. Schmidt, 6400 Ridgewood ave., Chevy Chase, Md., of Fighter Squadron 664.

Troubles were few and minor and due principally to the age and general decrepitude of the aircraft Naval reservists are forced by postwar economy to fly. Lieut. (j.g.) E. D. Cavileer, who lives in New Jersey but joined Attack Squadron 669 while a GI student at Georgetown University, had some trouble. So did a Grumman of Fighter Squadron 664 piloted by Lieut. (j.g.) G. B. Law.

The only plane to crash into the steel barrier stretched across the deck to stop those which miss the arrester gear was a Grumman pilot by Lieut. G. C. Hennessy, a management consultant at headquarters of the Air Force.

Enlisted men of the squadrons were teamed up with members of the Wright's crew to learn their exacting duties at first hand. Probably the hardest working crew here were the men under Lieut. O. M. Moulden of 9605 Dallas ave., Silver Spring, Md.

Collier's Article Blasts Neglect Of U. S. Civilian Defenses

Washington bureaucrats "are throwing up a barrage of double talk about fear of a "garrison state'" instead of organizing the Nation's civil defense, a Collier's magazine article charges in its current issue.

Entitled "Hiroshima, U. S. A.," the article by John Lear paints a dramatic picture—in both words and colored drawings — of the dropping of an atomic bomb on Manhattan with a resultant death toll of at least 180,000 New Yorkers.

Lear writes that instead of the Federal Government telling local communities what to do to prepare for the worst, it is using the "garrison state" argument "to imply that unless civil defense is organized at a snail's pace the American people will end up in a tight military fist." The attitude is characterized as "Truman's folly."

By comparison with what he discovered in checking civil defense plans here, Lear found on a visit to England that Britain is operating an effective civil defense corps with a paid staff of 1000 as a nucleus.

The British, the article says, are operating on three fundamental rules: a dependable warning system of enemy approach; properly constructed shelters to house people during attack, and an understanding by everyone that the only chance of survival lies in heading for shelter at the first warning.

Chinese, Red Burmese Fight on Thai Border

Bangkok, Thailand, July 26—(AP).—The Thai government has sent a special force of 100 armed police to reinforce border guards in its northern province, where Nationalist Chinese and Communist Burmese are reported fighting.

The Chinese troops, composed of remnants of the Nationalist 26th division, have been retreating toward Thailand after Burmese Communist bands tried to disarm them. The Chinese number about 3000 men.

Survivor's Story

Reds Bound Hands, Shot GI Prisoners

By Hal Boyle

An Advance Airbase In Korea, July 26 (AP).—A grim young corporal said today he and three other American prisoners were bound by North Koreans, forced to lie face down under a tree, and then machinegunned.

Two of the Americans were killed outright, he said. Another was wounded, probably fatally. The surviving corporal got three bullets in one shoulder.

U. S. fighter planes frightened the North Koreans away before they could finish him off, the corporal said.

The corporal, a tank gunner, told his story here while awaiting air evacuation to a hospital in Japan.

He said he was in one of five American light tanks which ran into a force of 800 Korean guerillas seven miles north of Yongdong Monday.

A guerilla shell hit the gas tank of his vehicle and the crew abandoned it. They piled into a roadside ditch.

"The Reds came down to the ditch from both ends with automatic weapons," the corporal related. "They killed our driver. The assistant driver disappeared. . . . I don't know what happened to him. The three of us left had to surrender."

Boots Ordered Removed

The Reds made the corporal and one of his comrades take off their combat boots and started to march them to a village two miles away.

Halfway there, the tank commander, who had been wounded in the leg, could walk no farther.

"So they shot him to death," the corporal said, "although he kept pleading, 'Please don't do it—I have a wife and baby.' Then they stripped the boots from his body and marched us on."

Two other American prisoners were brought to the group later. The Reds then tied the hands of all four behind their backs with field wire.

They were allowed to sleep until 1 a. m. Tuesday when the Reds began a night march. Later in the morning the Reds ran into American mortar fire and warplane strafing. They split into three groups and headed deeper into the hills.

The Red leader seemed to complain that the American prisoners were holding him up.

"He made us lie down in the shade of a tree—face down," the corporal said. "He told one of his men to machinegun us. The one who did it was just a kid, 16 years old. He gave us a burst."

Planes Scatter Guerillas

"Then our fighter planes strafed the area—and they left a lot of meat on the hillside. The guerillas scattered and ran."

The corporal said the man next to him was dying from bullet wounds in the chest and neck, "but he managed to untie my hands."

of a mile across a rice paddy to three American tanks on a road. He headed one back across the paddy.

"I wanted to try to get the soldier who had untied my hands, even though I felt sure he was dead." But the tank bogged down in the paddy.

He crawled back across the paddy and got into another tank. He started for headquarters but fainted from loss of blood and the tank ran into a ditch. Medics found him, unconscious.

Before he was put on a hospital plane for Japan, the corporal made one more comment:

"Those Reds aren't very good marksmen. If they didn't have automatic weapons I don't believe they could hit a house."

London, July 26 (AP).—Britain today announced she is sending a combat group of her regular army, including armor, to Korea and is putting her Far Eastern fleet on a war footing.

Two British Commonwealth countries, Australia and New Zealand, also announced that they will send land forces to join United Nations units under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

These reinforcements augmented an offer of 4500 trained combat troops by Turkey, 4000 soldiers by Thailand, 30 officers by Bolivia, and a limited force by Cuba. Nationalist China also has offered 30,000 veterans, but that offer was declined for strategic reasons.

[In Washington, Secretary of State Dean Acheson said the United States is very pleased at the way other members of the United Nations are lining up to contribute ground forces and other help for the Korean war.

[The rapidly mounting offers of assistance are of the greatest political and military importance, he said at a news conference. Acheson did not refer directly to any of the United Nations contributions, although he clearly had advance knowledge of the pending British announcement.]

How many British troops will be sent was not disclosed on security grounds. Qualified sources previously had indicated the force might consist of a battalion or a brigade—from about 1000 to 5000 men.

Truman Signs Arms Aid Bill With Warning

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday signed a $1,222,500,000 military-aid bill with a warning to "those bent on aggression" that freedom-loving nations will stand together to preserve their freedom.

The bill provides help for America's allies round the world, and particularly those in Europe who are banded together by the North Atlantic treaty.

Mr. Truman signed the measure at a ceremony in his White House office and issued a statement saying the event marked another step toward a common goal.

"Our goal," he said, "is to create the kind of strength which will deter potential aggressors from attacking so formidable and united groups; and to defeat aggression, should it come."

"The raw aggression" in Korea, the President said, does not lessen this country's concern with other areas where aggression also would affect the security of free nations.

The act, he said, will let the United States provide some of the equipment and materials our European partners need for balanced collective forces.

House Passes Bill To Improve U. S. Budget Methods

The House yesterday approved legislation modernizing Government acounting and budget methods as part of a continuing program to bring Federal fiscal procedures up to date.

Representative Frank M. Karsten (D., Mo.), author of the bill, balked however at Hoover Commission recommendations for setting up a new office of auditor general, responsible only to the President.

Under the compromise bill, continuing improvements in Government accounting and financial reporting would be worked out cooperatively by the Comptroller General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the budget director.

The Comptroller General's office, under fire in the Hoover report, would be continued as the agent of Congress in accounting matters. For the first time, responsibility would be centered in each Government agency to maintain its own accounts, under standards set by the Comptroller General.

'Tails Up'

GIs Praised For Conduct After Defeat

By Don Whitehead

Retreating from Yongdong (Thursday), July 27 (AP).—I've just seen Americans in defeat. And I'm proud of them, even if they were licked in the battle of Yongdong.

They came out of that fight with their tails up and they came out like men.

The Americans got out of Yongdong yesterday.

The Reds opened their attack on the town Monday. They hit the Americans on both sides. The United States forces decided to regroup in better defense positions a few hundred yards east of the line.

But the enemy struck again late in the day and kept right on coming after dark in the first night attack of the war.

At 1:30 Wednesday morning the North Koreans moved against the Americans with four tanks. The tanks herded several hundred Korean men, women and children before them.

The civilians were used as a human shield to protect the tanks during a bridge crossing.

It worked. The Americans withheld their fire. The tanks crossed the bridge and maneuvered into position.

"The Americans just couldn't fire on those women and children," said Maj. William O. Witherspoon, of South San Francisco.

"You know what this is like?" said a soldier just down from the hills. "It's like trying to play a three-man line against a seven-man line in football."

I suppose that's as good a description as any—except that in this game the stakes are higher and the grandstand is far away.

A wounded man told me the story of the human tank shield again. He said: "The first thing they did was drive a big crowd of refugees out onto a bridge that we had mined. And right behind those people were tanks.

"We couldn't shoot the tanks without hitting women and children. And we just couldn't kill women and children that way."

Yugoslavia Expected to Shift Stand, Denounce 'Aggression'

Belgrade, July 26. (U.P.)—The Communist Yugoslav government soon will annouce a change in attitude toward the Korean war by denouncing the North Korean attack as "agression," informed sources said today.

Yugoslavia was the only member of the United Nations Security Council to vote against the June 28 resolution authorizing use of American forces against the North Koreans.

Evidence disclosed in Washington and western European capitals and substantiated here indicates the negative vote was a purely personal action by Dr. Ales Bebler, Yugoslav delegate to the Security Council.

Yugoslav diplomats have made it clear to other diplomats that Marshal Tito's intention was to have Yugoslavia abstain from the U. N. ballot—as Bebler had done on the first U. N. resolution June 26, which condemned the North Koreans for agression.

Bebler could not contact his government in time for the emergency Security Council session. Apparently on his own initiative he introduced a resolution June 28 calling for a cease-fire and mediation. When this was voted down, he attempted to maintain Yugoslavia's Communist but anti-Cominform line by voting against the United States police action.

The Yugoslav government feels that the Bebler action may have two damaging effects:

1. Solidifying United States public opinion against further Yugoslav requests for economic aid.

2. Losing support among the non-Communist world at a time when the Korean war may only be a precedent for a similar attack against Yugoslavia by Soviet satellite neighbors.

The Yugoslavs are considering ways of "getting off the limb" without sacrificing their difficult role as "independent Communists." The Belgrade weekly Republika, which often serves as a sounding board for the Foreign Ministry, recently reported that from the Yugoslav point of view the North Koreans were guilty of aggression.

Chaplain Murdered In Korea Is Identified

United States Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, July 26 (U.P.). The Rev. F. G. Felthoelter, a Catholic Franciscan Priest of Cincinnati, O., was identified today as the unarmed chaplain who was believed murdered by North Korean Communists as he attended some 30 wounded Americans in the battle of the Kum River.

United Press front correspondent Robert Miller had reported that, when retreat became necessary, Father Felthoelter volunteered to stay with a group of about 30 wounded GI's of the 19th Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, who could not walk. He was last seen attending the wounded as the Reds poured through the American position. It was believed that all the wounded were murdered with him.

Menzies' Talks To Extend Beyond Korea

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies of Australia is due here late tonight for a week of discussions that will range far beyond the Korean war.

He wants to talk to President Truman and other Admiinstration leaders about (1) the whole problem of security in the Pacific, including the Japanese peace treaty; (2) the economic strengthening of southeast Asia; and (3) Australia's need for dollar financing to help her absorb immigrants from Europe.

In particular, he is expected to discuss the use of Australian ground troops in Korea, which his cabinet authorized while he was still on the high seas.

The President and his chief advisers are ready to welcome Menzies as a staunch ally and friend. They are so busy and preoccupied with Korea these days that they have little time for official visitors, but Menzies will be in a different category.

Secretary Acheson reminded his press conference yesterday of Australia's prompt response to the United Nation Security Council's resolutions, and of her air and naval forces which, he said, "have made an effective contribution to the operations in Korea."

'Visit Is Most Welcome'

"The Prime Minister's visit is most welcome," the Secretary said. "We appreciate the opportunity which it will afford for the discussion of matters of common interest to our two countries."

Menzies' visit here was his own idea, and came at such short notice that there was no time for American officials to prepare for a full-dress conference. Still, the attitude here is that it will be important and useful to get Menzies' views on any issues he may wish to raise.

The Menzies government and the Administration here already see eye to eye on the need of a Japanese peace treaty as soon as possible. But they still do not agree on the fostering of Japanese trade and shipping, and they will have to take a new look at the question of Japanese rearmament in the light of the Korean war.

The two governments also agree in general on the need of economic and technical help for southeast Asia. Last winter Australia took the lead in proposing a plan of British Commonwealth economic help in this area. It was one of the first of Menzies' decisions in foreign policy after his election, and it made him popular in Washington from the start.

London Man Heads World Baptist Body

Cleveland, July 26 (U.P.).—Dr. F. Townley Lord, of London, England, today was elected president of 16 million Baptists at their World Alliance here.

The internationally known minister, pastor of Bloomsbury Baptist Church in London, succeeds Dr. C. Oscar Johnson of St. Louis, who has held office since 1947.

Dr. Lord, 57, is a former president of the British Baptist Union and is a member of the central religious advisory committee of the British Broadcasting Co.

Seven new vice presidents elected at the eighth congress of the World Alliance were: Drs. W. L. Jarvis, Sydney, Australia; D. V. Jenison, Selma, Ala.; Louie D. Newton, Atlanta, Ga.; Manfredi Ronchi, Rome, Italy; W. C. Smalley, Edmonton, Alta.; Gunnar Westin, Uppsala, Sweden, and the Rev. Sadamato Kawando, Tokyo, Japan.

Before the elections the convention was told that "it is time the church woke up and used modern language if it is to make an appeal in a world which is secular, humanistic and in a jazzed-up state of mind."

Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg, of Syracuse, N. Y., former president of the Northern Baptist Convention, said "we have got to face the fact that we are living in a generation with a completely new mentality and even a different language."

He called for a "fresh vocabulary" for religion as well as a restatement of Protestant views in terms that will command respectful hearing and attention of our generation.

Aid Promised Families Of Moved Service Men

San Francisco, July 26—(AP).—The Sixth Army commander, Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, has assured Army men moved to the Orient that every assistance will be given families affected by the sudden departure of troops.

Wedemeyer has sent letters to all members of the Second Infantry division, which had been based at Fort Lewis, Wash., and to all members of the Sixth Army units moving t othe Far East command.

The general told dependents of servicemen assigned living quarters at Fort Lewis that, if the dependent housing must later be made available for troop housing, the command will help dependents establish themselves elsewhere.

Peace Prayers Asked by Pope In Encyclical

Vatican City, July 26 (AP).—Pope Pius called for prayers for peace in an encyclical issued today.

"Such murderous and inhuman weapons have been introduced and developed that . . . everything beautiful, good and holy that human genius has produced, all or nearly all, can be annihilated," he said.

The Pontiff's pronouncement—directed to Roman Catholic bishops but appealing to peoples and rulers of the whole world—was dated July 19. It was entitled "With greatest sorrow."

"Let us remember," he said, "what war brings: nothing but ruin, death and every kind of misery."

Exactly because war presents itself as something "terrifying and lethal," he said, it is hoped that "the dark and menacing clouds that now are the cause of so much fear will be removed—especially through the efforts of rulers."

"Many argue, write and talk about the manner of arriving finally at the much desired peace," he said. "But the principles that must constitute its solid base are by some neglected or openly repudiated.

"In fact, in not a few countries, not truth but falseness is presented under a certain guise of reason; not love, not charity are favored, but hate and blind rivalry are insinuated; the concord of citizens is not exalted, but disturbances and disorders are provoked."

A just and lasting peace "can be obtained only from the principles and rules dictated by Christ and put into practice with sincere piety," the 74-year-old Pontiff said.

These, he said, recall men to truth, justice and charity, curb their greed and make all "recognize the liberty due to religion."

The Pope said those who "insidiously hurl against this Apostolic See and the Catholic Church the accusation" of wanting a new war are in error.

Marshall Plan Funds May Aid Arms Output

The Government here is considering whether to let Marshall Plan countries use the so-called counterpart funds to speed up arms production.

Secretary Acheson told his press conference yesterday that the use of counterpart funds for rearmament was being studied. He said his impression was that this would require a change in the Marshall Plan legislation.

The counterpart funds are pools of local currencies in each country, set aside to match the dollar grants from the United States.

The original ECA Act of 1948 provided that these funds could he used for anti-inflationary purposes or "for the stimulation of productive activity and the exploration for and development of new sources of wealth," or for other purposes consistent with the Recovery Act.

The Marshall Plan countries were not free to use these funds as they chose. In each instance they had to get the approval of the ECA Administrator, in consultation with the President's National Advisory Council on International Monetary and Financial Problems.

In Great Britain all the counterpart funds have been used until now as a brake on inflation. But in continental Europe, the ECA authorities have let them be used heavily for developing heavy industries, for improving harbors and transportation, and for other purposes that indirectly would help a rearmament effort.

Acheson's view, apparently, is that if these funds are to be used directly for rearmament the law should be amended to say so.

During the last debate on ECA, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), proposed just such an amendment, but Administration Senators opposed it and defeated it as a distortion of ECA objectives. The Korean war appears, therefore, to have changed a good deal of thinking on this subject in high places here.

Canadian Navy Seeking Strange Undersea Craft

Ottawa, July 26 (AP).—The Canadian Navy said today that one or more foreign submarines probably have been off the east coast of Canada during the past month.

While the navy's statement did not mention Russia by name, naval officials said they believed Russia is the only foreign power that could have had the mysterious undersea craft operating there.

The Canadian Navy and Air Force are on the prowl, trying to spot one intruder which may have come within Canada's three-mile limit. It was explained that if the submarine is outside the three-mile limit Canadian plane and ships will shadow it. If the craft is inside the limit they can order it into the nearest harbord and take military action if it disobeys.

Russians Have 2,800,000 Men Under Arms, Shinwell Declares

London, July 26 (AP).—Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell said today Russia has 2,800,000 men under arms, including "an appreciable number in immediate readiness" in eastern Germany.

Shinwell told the Commons he has learned that the Soviet Union:

1. Maintains an army of 175 active divisions, of which a third are mechanized.
2. Has 19,000 military planes, including jet aircraft of the latest design—both bombers and fighters.
3. Has 25,000 tanks.
4. Could "double" its 2,800,000-man standing army by calling up reserves.
5. Has considerable naval forces which include strong fleets of submarines, many of them of modern design.
6. Is spending "not less than 13 percent" of its national income on its armed forces.

Despite this, Shinwell declared "in any trial of strength between Russia and her satellites and the forces of the democracies, there can be no doubt which would, in the end, prevail."

He said the Atlantic Pact nations and their Allies have manpower and material resources which "far exceed those of any opposing combination."

"Their vast resources, industrial skill and development capacity," he concluded, "would ensure that they could outbuild and out-design their opponents."

6 Killed as AF B-25 Crashes in Hailstorm

Oakley, Kans., July 26 (U.P.).—An Air Force B-25 crashed near Oakley today in a violent hailstorm and all six persons aboard were killed instantly.

An operations chart found in the wreckage showed the plane cleared through Kansas City, Mo., en route from Scott Air Force Base, Ill., to Lowry Field, Denver, Colo.

Session With the President Climaxes Boys' Nation Visit

Boys' Nation, the American Legion program to familiarize 86 youths with the workings of their Government, reached its climax in the Rose Garden of the White House yesterday.

The way to learn about government, President Truman told them, is to become a part of it.

The President reminded the youngsters that "you'll have to take over after the old fellows like myself pass on."

The authority starts at the bottom, with the people, Mr. Truman said, and that's where is should be kept. Politics is nothing but public relations, he added.

The President appeared to be lacking one of his upper teeth when he spoke to the boys. White House officials said the President had lost a crown and is waiting for a permanent replacement.

The boys later watched the House of Representatives in action and spent the rest of the afternoon and evening visiting at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Vice President Barkley is scheduled to be the principal speaker at Boys' Nation graduation exercises today.

Bank Robbed of $55,000

Cincinnati, July 26 (U.P.).—Three men robbed the suburban Corryville Fifth Third Union Trust Co. branch today of an estimated $55,000. The bandits locked 15 bank employes and customers in a basement.

'Phillip Dean' Shot, Taken Prisoner By North Koreans

Eighth U. S. Army Headquarters in Korea July 26 (AP).—A wounded American tank gunner who escaped his Red captors said today that Mike Gigantis, correspondent for the International News Service, had been taken prisoner by North Korean forces in the Yongdong area.

Gigantis wrote under the by-line "Phillip Dean."

The gunner said Dean's jeep had been ambushed and that Dean had been shot once in the hand and twice in the thigh. None of the wounds appeared serious.

Dean was wounded slightly in the shoulder by a shell fragment in the fighting around Taejon. He came here for treatment Sunday and returned immediately to the front.

100,000 Reds Set To Invade Quemoy

Anti-Leopold Forces Stage New Strikes

Brussels July 26.—(U.P.)—More than 130,000 workers struck today in protest against the return of King Leopold and labor leaders said the walkouts would continue until he abdicates.

A wave of anti-royalist sabotage swung into its second day and new strikes and demonstrations were called for Thursday. Anti-Leopold men said it was the beginning of a "fight to the finish."

A general strike in and around Liege started at noon, involving an estimated 110,000 workers. The strike was 95 percent effective and stores were closed and public transportation was halted.

A spokesman for the Socialist-controlled General Federation of Labor said the general strike would spread to the Charleroi district Thursday, adding 100,000 workers to those who struck for an indefinite period. Earlier strikes were for 24 hours.

Andre Renard ,national secretary of the labor federation, told newsmen the federation plans to call a nation-wide general strike.

The Catholic government, meanwhile, weathered its first parliamentary storm since it returned the King. The vote was demanded by the Socialists, but the Socialists, Liberales and Communists stalked out of the chamber before the vote was taken.

Taipei, Formosa, July 26 (AP).—Chinese Nationalist military quarters today said seven to nine Chinese Red divisions, totaling 100,000 men, are massed along the Fukien Province coast, ready for an invasion of Quemoy.

Quemoy, which the Chinese call Golden Gate, is a 50-square-mile island off the Red port of Amoy, 100 miles west of Formosa.

Reports from Quemoy said Communists shelling of the island, which began Friday, was continuing sporadically.

'Reform Committee' Directs Nationalists

Taipei, Formosa, July 26 (U.P.)—A 16-man "reform committee" took command of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang party today as the first step in a sweeping reorganization ordered earlier this week.

The unwieldy Central Executive and Central Supervisory Committees—which had a total membership of 500—were abolished.

Chiang told the executive committee's final session that Nationalist China must either reform or face annihilation by the Communists.

Chiang's cabinet met today to discuss the progress of efforts to get the United States to approve an attack against the Red invaders before their invasion fleet gets under way.

President Truman has ordered the U. S. Seventh Fleet to protect Formosa, but he has asked the Nationalists to refrain from attacks on the Red-held mainland.

Pact Partners Begin Forging Unified Army

London, July 26 (AP).—The Atlantic pact partners today got down to the detailed job of forging a unified army out of western Europe's individual armed forces.

Less than 24 hours after they had converged on London for their first session as a civilian high command of the defenses of the West, the pact's Council of Deputies plunged into the technical aspects of the problem behind guarded doors. They met for three hours.

The need for an international army in which member states would contribute specialized forces and skills has been underscored by the war in Korea, a source close to the American delegation said.

This feeling has been communicated by the American chairman, Charles M. Spofford, to his 11 European associates.

The Atlantic pact chiefs' meeting here last May envisaged an international force in which the various military burdens would be distributed according to each nation's ability.

Thus, the countries of the European mainland would be called on to supply the lion's share of ground forces. A minimum of about 30 divisions, or 450,000 men, was envisaged. British and American troops stationed in Germany might form part of this nucleus. The United States would chip in with the necessary heavy naval vessels and long-range bombers.

To say that this plan of action has been altered because of the Korean fighting would be inaccurate, a person close to the American delegation said.

After the military knots are unraveled, the council will have an equally formidable problem: how to pool Europe's resources to make the military force effective.

Included in this is the question of American contributions and how they are to be made.

Besides the United States, the members taking part in the discussions are Britain, France, Denmark, Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands, Italy, Portugal, Luxembourg, Canada and Iceland.

Indonesia Closes Ports To Ships in Korea War

Jakarta, Indonesia, July 26—(U.P.)—Foreign warships taking part in United Nations operations against Communist North Korea were banned today from refueling, loading or being repaired in Indonesian ports.

The maritime commander of the Surabaya Naval base said he was speaking on behalf of the Indonesian government which has adopted a neutral policy in the Korean conflict.

Navy Officer Defeats Cancer, Sea Duty Approved by Senate

action: "I was mad, more than anything else. The fact I wasn't going to get well didn't bother me so much in itself. It was the fact I couldn't be a naval officer any longer—all my life I have wanted to be a naval officer."

Playing what long odds they had, Navy doctors went to work on the officer, began applying radiation treatment to the cancer, in the region of the kidney and the groin.

The two weeks passed . . . and Rosenberg was alive. By September 1948 he was out of the hospital and apparently completely okay. He was called before the retirement board, which wanted to retire him.

"It's silly to say I'm sick," he pleaded, "you ought to send me to sea."

He remembers: "I think they were about convinced. Then I had bad luck—doctors found another cancerous spot in my neck. I had to go out to Bethesda and have this little nubbin taken out. And the board—well, they retired me, told me to go find myself a spot of sand somewhere and relax."

Every year on the anniversary of his retirement Rosenberg wrote the Navy a letter, saying in effect: "I'm in great shape—been sailing a 40-foot sloop . . ."

This persistence was rewarded with duty teaching seamanship at the Naval Academy. Nice, but not what he wanted—he wanted to be put back on the active list of the Navy. Wanted sea duty.

He discovered it would take an Act of Congress to accomplish this—at the time of his retirement the Career Compensation Act hadn't been passed.

So he went to work on getting that bill. For two years he told everyone who would listen: "I'm a trained, competent naval officer, and a naval aviator as well, and all traces of the cancer are gone. It's a waste of the people's money giving me three-fourths retirement pay for doing nothing.

He found plenty of officers helping him. Senator Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, Rosenberg's State of residence, introduced the bill.

Rosenberg waited hours yesterday for the Senate to get to his bill. And then it came, and the straightest pair of shoulders in Washington marched out of the gallery. If the bill goes on through the House now, he has been told, he will get shipboard duty in the Far East.

He had said: "The only reason I will tell this story now is so that others may see that there is definitely hope for those who have cancer. . . . Cancer does not mean necessarily a man is going to die."

Delinquents Face Penalties

quents" have been found, explaining all but three or four of the District "no-shows" had been located last night by Selective Service and local board staffs.

Failure of selectees to inform their draft board of address changes or marriage subsequent to registration are the most frequent explanations given by men who did not answer their first examination call. The law requires registrants to notify their boards of all changes of address and status.

Figures were not available last night on how many of the 50 District men—all from D. C. draft boards 12 and 13—passed the tests yesterday, but officials predicted the number might yield about 10 men qualified for military service. The Monday tests netted 15 men.

Washington's quota in the first draft call is 101. The next group of 50 local men will be tested Friday at Arlington Farms.

At Richmond, Col. Asher W. Harmon, Virginia State director, also gave a similar warning. Yesterday he ordered the immediate induction of nine Richmond men who did not show up on time for examinations Monday.

He said anyone failing to obey draft board orders automatically waives his right to classication and is subject to immediate induction.

The Virginia Service director also sent out a second call for 1796 men to take preliminary tests between August 14 and 29. This call, he emphasized, was aimed only to build up a reserve for future quotas, but stressed, as officials did here, that there is no immediate hint of another induction call.

In Maryland, State Director Col. Henry C. Stanwood reported that about 30 percent of the selected registrants have not appeared for their preliminary tests.

Ten Air Groups Will Be Added

argued the actual combat forces were stronger as the result of the economy cutbacks than before "muscle-tightening" was started.

There was no definite word on the breakdown of the 10 additional operating groups the Air Force will get. However, it is understood there will be an increase in tactical air groups to meet the current situation, and then a buildup of all kinds of aviation to cope with the over-all world picture.

Some of the new groups undoubtedly will be equipped with World War II type aircraft taken out of mothballs, until newer craft come off the assembly. The Air Force awarded contracts totaling $14,384,460 for reconditioning piston-engined F-51 fighters on June 30. That probably includes something like 700 of the craft.

Late in the day, the Senate unanimously passed legislation lifting the present 2,005,000-man ceiling on overall military personnel. The bill now goes back to the House for action on a proviso removing the limit only until July 31, 1954. Earlier, the House had voted to wipe out the ceiling premanently.

More Marines Are Favored

Congressional proposals for expanding the Armed Forces to a greater degree than asked by President Truman came during closed sessions of the House Armed Services Committee and the Senate military appropriations subcommittee.

Members of the former group said several Congressmen urged expanding the Marine Corps to 250,000 officers and men, after questioning Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Leatherneck commandant. The present program calls for boosting the Marines from 75,000 to 137,000.

Senator Milton R. Young (R., N. Dak.) told reporters after the appropriations session that the attitude of the group was that even greater rearming steps should be taken than proposed. The committee heard testimony from Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and uniformed heads of the armed forces.

Another committee member, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R. Nebr.) said:

"This $10,500,000,000 is only the first bite in the arms program."

To Ask More When Needed

Senator Young declared that Johnson and Bradley assured them that everything possible will be done to speed up the procurement of new weapons and equipment. He quoted the two officials as saying they will come back for more money when they need it.

Vinson outlined the naval expansion program to reporters after another closed-door session with Pentagon chiefs. Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, was before the group Monday. Cates appeared yesterday, followed by Air Force chiefs. The latter are expected to continue this morning and then Army leaders will be heard.

The group called Cates after General Bradley outlined Marine Corps expansion plans at a special Pentagon session Tuesday with 50 Senators and Congressmen. Some members wanted the Marine commandant's views first hand.

Chairman Vinson said the naval expansion provides for adding six small carriers, two cruisers, 32 destroyers and five submarines to the active fleet during the fiscal year ending next June 30.

Apparently the six smaller flattops include the two escort carriers already announced as undergoing activation on the West Coast. At that time, it was indicated that a total of six of the light plane carriers were to be hauled out of mothballs.

Other Congressional sources said the Fleet might be expanded by four instead of two cruisers. Two hospital ships and other auxiliary craft also are said to be in the reactivation program.

Vinson said the move will bring the number of big carriers in service to 10; the number of destroyers to 172 and the total light carriers to 14. He would not reveal the overall submarine strength, saying this was secret.

However, the Senate hearings on the 1951 defense budget revealed that the planned active Fleet this year would include 70 submarines. The 1951 operating plan was compared then with that in 1949 and 1950.

Congressmen pointed out yesterday that the current plans to expand the Fleet is a smaller force than was afloat in '49, before the economy cutback. That year there were 11 big carriers, 10 small flattops, 31 cruisers, 160 destroyers and 80 subs.

Members of the House Committee said the present plan for expanding the Marine Corps will provide about two war-strength divisions, plus 16 air groups.

250,000 Minimum Urged

Representative Patterson (R., Conn.), a former Marine Corps major, urged a minimum strength of 250,000 Leathernecks, including 24 air groups. Other members said 204,000 Marines would provide 4 divisions.

Most of the warships being added to the Fleet will come out of mothballs. However, one of the carriers is a new one nearing completion, and some destroyers also are under construction. Doubling of workyard shifts is planned to finish the craft as well as the carrier, Essex, now undergoing modernizing, Congressmen said.

Secretary Johnson testified in executive session, but released his prepared statement beforehand. He declared that the present military establishment "is a sounder mobilization base than any the United States has ever had before" and that the force now constitute a closely knit land, sea and air team.

Swift Decisions Cited

"The swift decisions during the past four weeks to coordinate the combat efforts of the Army, Navy and Air Force in the Far East are striking examples of the benefits of unification in an emergency", he said.

Though manpower, ships, planes and units were cut back, Johnson said that the number of men in the Army's mobile combat reserve was boosted by 165 percent. Navy ships now can operate, whereas two years ago 111 active vessels were "immobilized" due to lack of personnel, he stated.

Other defense developments:

1. The Senate passed a bill authorizing the Navy to construct an atomic-powered submarine, several other radically different submersibles and other new war vessels. Expenditure of 350 million dollars to build 50,000 tons of new craft and modernize 200,000 tons of existing ships is provided. The bill now goes back to the House for action on minor amendments.

2. The Army said it may have to order reserve medical officers to active duty to meet an immediate shortage of 354 doctors. Only 15 acceptances were received from 3000 reservists who received letters asking them to volunteer. Similar action may be necessary to get 500 doctors required by the Air Force, it was said. The Navy stated it needs 400 doctors, but expects to get them from volunteers or officers called up with organized reserve units.

(3) Appeals went out from the Army for WAC reserve captains and lieutenants to volunteer for active duty tours. Age limits are specified and the need is mostly in special fields. WAC enlisted reservists in certain categories also are needed, the Army said.

Police Get the Point; So Did Nearly Nude Man

Raleigh, N. C., July 26 (AP).—A woman telephoned police here that a nearly naked man was in the neighborhood.

Policemen sped to the scene, but returned without making an arrest. They explained:

"This man walked into a wasps' nest. Had to disrobe."

said the Reds were attacking in the Hamchang area both frontally and with a flanking movement.

Headquarters said, however, that the entire line running all the way from Yongdong approximately 100 miles eastward to the coast was fairly stable with no important changes.

Some Red Gains in South

The enemy which has been thrusting east toward Pusan seemed to have made some gains, however, deep in South Korea.

Headquarters said a Red force had advanced to within 15 miles west of Hamyang, which is 48 miles south of Yongdong and about 70 air miles west of Pusan.

Another Red force, which apparently seized the prime rail and road city of Sunchon on the south coast, was striking southeastword down the Yosu peninsula.

Headquarters said it was moving on Yosu, a good port at the tip of the peninsula. It is 25 miles southeast of Sunchon.

United States and British carrier planes flew in close support to battlefront forces yesterday. Jet planes renewed night attacks, heaping destruction on a Red column with jellied gasoline fire bombs.

A field dispatch said a single enemy plane made a raid on Taegu, the refugee South Korean capital midway between Yongdong and Pusan. The plane came over early today dropped a single fire bomb, which burned itself out harmlessly in a public square.

The United States fleet hammered at enemy troop concentrations in the Communistss' east coast anchor positions around Yongdok, about 90 air miles north of Pusan.

The British warships blockaded the west coast. They bombarded an enemy concentration of Kunsan, west coast port about 65 miles west of Yongdong.

Bomb Dropped on Taegu

Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson from United States Eighth Army headquarters in Korea said the Communists were moving troops to the front opposite the First Cavalry division east of Yongdong.

One company of the First Cavalry, which is an infantry division despite its name, was cut off in yesterday's fighting around Yongdong, an Eighth Army spokesman said.

The spokesman reported food and supplies were being airdropped to the company, and ground units were going to its rescue later today.

The spokesman disagreed somewhat with the reports of a Fifth Air Force spokesman concerning Hadong, high point of the Reds' eastward thrust from Southwest Korea.

He said American forces there were preparing to move into Hadong "as soon as the town stops burning." Allied planes set it afire.

The Fifth Air Force spokesman said there were "unconfirmed reports" that a "beautifully coordinated" air-ground attack drove the Communists from Hadong and left the town in Allied hands.

The air force source said some of the U. S. troops at Hadong apparently were fresh soldiers tasting Korean battle for the first time.

The headquarters spokesman mentioned the 25th division, which is believed to be fighting northeast of Yongdong.

He did not specify the location, but said 25th patrols exchanged fire with enemy skirmishers yesterday and the northerners fled on horseback. It was the first mention of the use of horses by the northerners.

The Air Force spokesman said carrier-based planes for the first time teamed with ground troops in attacks in the western and central fronts, striking in the Yongdong and Hamchang areas "with excellent results."

The main American positions are just east of Yongdong, which is 95 air miles northwest of Pusan. Hamchang is 35 air miles northeast of Yongdong.

The Fifth Air Force spokesman was the only source so far for the report that fresh American troops were fighting in the Hadong battle.

(There was no indication from Tokyo or Korea as to where such American troops might come from. They appeared to be fresh elements from the First Cavalry or Twenty-fifth Division which had not been committed to battle previously. There has been no announcement of new American arrivals in Korea since last midweek when the arrival of the First Cavalry and the Twenty-fifth Division was disclosed.)

General MacArthur's headquarters announcement early Thursday discounted the seriousness of the Red threat that reached across the south coast to Hadong.

Hadong was captured Tuesday by North Korean forces which had reached the sea in the southwest corner of Korea, 230 miles below Parallel 38, turned eastward with virtually no opposition, and drove toward Pusan.

The southwestern enemy forces previously had been opposed only by South Korean police units. MacArthur's headquarters reported Wednesday that the enemy was prowling at large with tanks and troops in that area.

On the heavy-fighting central front below Yongdong, MacArthur's headquarters reported, foot soldiers of the United States First Cavalry Division repulsed several assaults and inflicted heavy casualties on infantry-tank forces.

These reports came several hours after a MacArthur spokesman told reporters in Tokyo that the central battle lines are being stabilized and that Southeast Korea certainly can be held as a beachhead for future operations.

[The United Press quoted the spokesman as saying that if he could reveal all the information he knew "you wouldn't be worried either." He declined to discuss the situation in the South, saying "let's not say anything and just let the Reds find out what we've got." He added that the South Koreans are showing remarkable stiffening.—Editor's Note.]

In the central sector where the heaviest fighting goes on below abandoned Yongdong on the road-rail line 100 air miles northwest of Pusan, pilot spotters reported concentrations of enemy troops around Muju, moving toward Sanwon.

Muju is a dozen miles south of Yongdong and Sanwon is to the east on a spur railway and road line south of Kumchon, the main rail junction 20 air miles south and east of Yongdong.

On this attack, the North Koreans apparently are trying a bypass envelopment aimed back at the main communication line running northwest out of Pusan to Kumchon and Yongdong.

Eastward from the First Cavalry's central front, North Koreans were exerting pressure against Yongsan, Chongsan and Ponghwang mountain, MacArthur's early morning announcement said.

This is on the sector held by South Koreans and the United States 25th Tropic Lightning division to the northernmost point of the long front, at Yechon, and to the east coast. Yongsan is eight air miles from Yongdong, Chongsan 12 miles and Ponghwang 23 miles.

On the east coastal end of the front, pilots saw numbers of Red troops moving southward from Samchok toward the burned-out, Red-held port of Yongdok.

MacArthur's intelligence officers surmised these troops are going to help elements of the Fifth North Korean division which was "heavily engaged south of Yongdok"—presumably by South Koreans and parts of the American 25th.

Gen. Gray Wants Six Divisions

With United States Troops in Korea, July 26 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay today said that six American divisions could whip the North Korean Communist army and "walk to Seoul as fast as we could repair the bridges."

Gay, commanding general of the First Cavalry Division, told newsmen that American forces now are in better defensive positions and will be able to put up a stronger fight.

Gay was chief of staff for Gen. George S. Patton's famous Third Army in its European campaign. He said one corps such as the Third Army had could lick the North Koreans.

Gay said he was confident that American troops have hurt the Reds far more than the Communists have hurt the Americans.

"It couldn't be any other way with all the artillery fire that has been put on them," he added. "We shot more artillery at them in one day than they have shot as us during all this campaign."

Doctor Hurls Challenge to Reds to Debate

An Australian physician, who says he knows more about communism than the Communists, yesterday challenged any party member or sympathizer to a public debate on the movement's "real goals."

Dr. Fred C. Schwarz, Sydney general practitioner and psychiatrist, said such a debate would be a healthy thing for Americans. They would learn something about the party and be better armed to combat it, he said.

"The only thing which matches an American detestation of communism is his ignorance of what it is," the visitor declared, in his clipped Australian way.

The debate challenge has been hurled by Dr. Schwartz in many American cities during his two-month tour here.

In case anyone is interested here, Dr. Schwarz is staying at the Dodge Hotel, 20 E st. nw.

Last night he spoke at an interdenominational meeting in the National Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch rd. nw., on "Communism, Its Origin, Philosophy, Promise and Destiny."

Measures to Bar 'Trojan Horse' Tactics Take Effect

San Francisco, July 26 (AP).—Security measures designed to guard Pacific Coast ports against "Trojan Horse" ships which might be carrying atomic bombs were in effect today.

The newly ordered Government loyalty check to prevent Communists from shipping on American merchant vessels was expected to be instituted immediately.

Federal officials confirmed that customs inspectors will board and examine all foreign ships as they enter the three-mile limit.

Collector of Customs Paul Leake reported the ships would be searched by inspectors carrying Geiger counters.

Boxer War Relic

Old Marine Bugle Called To Korea

Old Trumpet, the battered instrument which heralded the Marines to Tientsin in the Boxer Rebellion 50 years ago, was en route to Korea last night after a Leatherneck tug o' war over who should do the tooting.

Several days ago the Marine Band office here announced that Old Trumpet was ready to sound a few notes in Korea. It has been in retirement at the Marine Band Museum here since its big moment in Tientsin.

Bids to carry Old Trumpet to Korea came from members of the Drum and Bugle Corps but were rejected. Maybe the bandsmen won't be shipped out was the reason given.

The First Marine Division telegraphed Washington for the horn on the promise they would take Old Trumpet to "lands it has known before."

Then, according to local Marine bandsmen, a plea came from Second Division Marines, veterans of the Tientsin campaign, demanding "Let us take it back to the Far East."

The deadlock was broken by Marine Corps band members who decided "a band from the First Division is on its way. Let them have it."

So Old Trumpet returned to the war under the arm of an unidentified officer being transferred to the First Division.

Senate Tries Trick On Oct. 31 Tricksters

The Senate took time out from world affairs yesterday to do something about Halloween.

It passed and sent to the House a resolution to authorize the President to call October 31 "Youth Honor Day."

Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee said hopefully that the idea is to get the kids interested in "less destructive channels."

$42,109 Paid To PMA Staff For Meeting

The Government paid $42,109 expenses for 2291 farmer part-time employes of the Minnesota Office of the Production and Marketing Administration to attend a St. Paul convention last April, where Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan discussed the Brannan Plan.

The cost of the meeting was revealed to the House Lobby Investigating Committee by the General Accounting Office yesterday. GAO ruled that the use of Federal funds for the meeting was legal.

In addition to the $42,109 paid 248 county and 2043 community committeemen, it said the City of St. Paul paid $838 for use of the St. Paul Auditorium.

The GAO report said Chairman George E. Woodward of the Washington County PMA office was "reluctant" to urge community committeemen to attend. It said "he considered it a type of coercion, but was finally persuaded by other county committee members to do so."

Chicago Man Bound Over in Area Slaying

Eugene Crumpton, 38, of Chicago, Ill., charged with murder in the shooting of an Arlington man, was held for the Fairfax County grand jury yesterday after a hearing in Trial Justice Court.

He pleaded innocent to the Sunday slaying of James Harris, 43, of 1731 S. 12th st., Arlington, on Rugby rd., near Pender, Va.

Fairfax police testified yesterday that Harris was shot three times with a .38 caliber pistol before his body was dumped from a car and left on Rugby rd.

Nearby residents noticed a car with Illinois tags driving off, found Harris' body and notified police, who picked up Crumpton on Route 236.

Two S. C. Incumbents' Defeat Gives House First 'Casualties'

By The Associated Press

Democratic primary voters tossed out the veteran Senator Elmer Thomas in Oklahoma and two first-term House members in South Carolina in Tuesday's balloting, late returns showed yesterday.

Thomas' defeat by 48-year-old Representative Mike Monroney by about 25,000 votes marked the fourth Senator—and third Democrat—to taste defeat so far in the picking of nominees for 17 Senatorships to be decided in November.

The South Carolina losers—Representatives James B. Hare and Hugo S. Sims, jr.—were the first 1950 casualties among House incumbents, with nominations for 240 seats—more than half the House membership of 435—already decided.

Democrats in Louisiana returned Senator Russell B. Long, son of the late Senator Huey P. and nephew of Gov. Earl Long, to a full six-year term in the Senate. He won handily over Malcolm Lafargue, Shreveport attorney, and two others.

All eight Louisiana House members were renominated—equivalent to election.

Pro-Truman forces were pleased over the decision in Arkansas. Gov. Sid McMath, a Truman supporter and Democratic "regular," won another term by crushing former Gov. Ben Laney, anti-Truman States' Rights leader, by nearly 2 to 1.

In the only congressional contest in Arkansas, Representative Oren Harris won over two opponents in the Seventh District.

Monroney's defeat of the 73-year-old Thomas, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and Military Appropriations subcommittee and a Senator for four terms, captured the main interest of politicians.

Johnston Murray, son of a former Governor, apparently won the Democratic governorship nomination in Oklahoma over William O. Coe. But his margin was so slight a recount is likely.

The complete unofficial tabulation is 235,099 for Murray, 234,304 for Coe.

In the only two House runoffs in Oklahoma, Representative Victor Wickersham won the Democratic nomination in the Seventh District and former State Senator John Jarman captured the Democratic nomination in the Fifth District.

Both Representatives Sims and Hare, defeated in South Carolina, were World War II veterans. Two former Representatives, John P. Riley and W. J. Bryan Dorn, were the victors.

Jobless Man Found Slashed

Arley Ray Unger, until recently public relations director for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, was found yesterday afternoon in his parked car, his left hand slashed, Prince Georges County police reported.

Unger, 40, who gave his address to police as 9096 Baltimore blvd., Berwyn, was admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, where attendants said his condition was not serious.

Police said the car was parked in front of the Town Hall Tavern, 8135 Baltimore blvd., Berwyn. Scattered on the front seat were several razor blades. Unger told them, they said, he was out of work.

An official of the Sanitary Commission confirmed that Unger was discharged about a week ago. He declined to state why. Unger was employed by the Washington Post as a part-time reporter several years ago.

Small Grain Harvests Held Back by Rain

Growing crops in Maryland continued to make good progress, but wet weather held back harvest of small grains, the State's crop and weather reporters said yesterday.

Labor Unity Meeting Ends In Optimism

The AFL and CIO ended their first "unity" conference yesterday on a note of high optimism that actual merger can be worked out.

They scheduled a second meeting August 4 in Chicago and named CIO Vice President Allan Haywood and Charles MacGowan, AFL boilermakers' president, to map its agenda.

The Chicago meeting, to be held a few days before the AFL executive council meeting, will elect officers of the permanent unity committee and consider steps to halt interunion raiding and jurisdictional disputes.

Haywood said CIO and AFL members of the committee are approaching the jobs of uniting the labor movement with "determination" and "faith that the job will be done."

MacGowan was equally optimistic.

Giving Away Food Poses New Problem

The House Agriculture Committee is trying to find a way to spend about 50 million dollars to give away about 400 million dollars dollars worth of perishable foodstuffs without charging the 50 million to the Government farm program.

Part of the 50 million—which amounts to more than 33 cents for every man, woman and child in the United States—will be spent to pay the freight to give the stuff away, either here or abroad. The rest will be spent putting it in pretty packages so the Agriculture Department can induce people, either Americans of foreigners, to take it for nothing.

The tremendous stocks the committee seeks to get rid of, delivered without cost virtually to the user's doorstep, include:

One hundred and ninety-two million pounds of butter worth about 100 million dollars.

Three hundred and twenty-two million pounds of dried milk worth about 50 million dollars.

Eighty million pounds of cheese worth about 25 million dollars.

One hundred and seven million pounds of dried eggs worth about 150 million dollars.

In addition, the Commodity Credit Corporation, which operates Uncle Sam's big farm support program, has a lot of spoilable incidentals, such as about nine million pounds of prunes, five and a half million pounds of raisins, half a million pounds of turkeys, almost a million pounds of navy beans, and varying amounts of peas and rice, which sooner or later it will have to dispose of. Besides, it has about 17 million dollars worth of Mexican canned beef—already near the spoiling point—which it isn't allowed to give away in this country, and can't give away abroad unless it pays the freight.

After discussing the predicament for three days with Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan, the committee virtually decided in open session yesterday, to ask Congress for the 50 million extra and charge it to foreign relief.

(In 1945 Congress voted to turn over half a billion dollars from lend-lease funds to be used for the farm price support operations. That was spent, in addition to regular Agriculture Department appropriations, in two years.)

At the committee's direction, Brannan yesterday furnished it with the estimated cost of packaging and delivering the milk, butter, eggs, etc., to recipients. His experts, he said, figure it will cost at least 26 million dollars to "reprocess and repackage" the stuff and 18 million dollars to transport it.

The committee, after a short discussion, virtually ignored the suggestion of one or two members that the surplus stocks be turned over to the expanding Armed Services, or to the Veterans Bureau or other Government agencies. Instead it was agreed that they should buy in the open market, the same as anyone else.

The program the committee is considering, would deliver the foodstuffs in new packaging to central distributing points in the various States. It would then be up to the States to pass it out.

One catch was explained by Brannan yesterday. The States accepting the gifts must agree that the supplies will be used in addition to the regular purchases those communities make for foodstuffs. In other words, the Government does not want the commodities it gives away, to reduce the relief buying from local business houses ordinarily conducted by State welfare groups.

Brannan reported that in the past CCC had not found the State welfare agencies "too cooperative" in accepting free donations of CCC food supplies bought by Uncle Sam in its expensive program to keep farm prices high.

Baruch Calls for Rationing, Tax Hike, Urges Price Control

hours, moving about the committee table the better to hear the questions Senators wanted to ask of him. Once when Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.) tried to draw him into an unfamiliar field, he told a Wall Street story. It was about a "great speculator," a man who was smart but lacking in formal education.

At a dinner given in his honor, the speculator was flanked by two women. One of them tried to make conversation, and asked:

"Mr. X, do you enjoy Balzac?"

"I don't deal in them outside stocks," replied Mr. X.

Discomfort or Defeat?

Baruch, when talking about matters he dealt with as chairman of the War Industries Board in 1917-18 and advised on again in World War II, was emphatic. He said Mr. Truman's program would "fall flat" unless it was rounded out with additional controls.

"The situation is sufficiently grave," Baruch said, "to warrant an over-all ceiling across the entire economy, over all prices, wages, rents, fees and so on, with high enough taxes to prevent profiteering and to pay all defense costs, and an all-embracing, effective system of priorities . . . The very fact that we face a struggle of such uncertain duration and cost means that the sooner our economy is brought under control the better . . . Before the peace is won, we shall have to come to this mobilization. It will never be easier to do than now. . . .

"It is the choice of 'peace' or 'butter,' of mobilizing our strength now, while peace can still be saved, or of clinging to petty wants and petty profits, imperiling our freedom and civilization. . . . Which shall it be—discomfort or defeat?"

The committee members obviously were impressed by Baruch's views, but not many seemed prepared to embrace them at this time. Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), and others wanted to know how they could "sell" his program to the American people when President Truman had asked for much less.

Baruch conceded this would be difficult if Mr. Truman maintains his present position.

"He will have to take the responsibility, not Congress," Baruch said.

Four Others Heard

Chairman Maybank called four witnesses after Baruch left the stand. They were Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange; Russell Smith, legislative secretary of the National Farmers Union; Allen B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Walter R. Scott, representing the Board of Trade of Chicago, the Minneapolis Grain Exchange and the Kansas City, Mo., Board of Trade.

Goss said the pending bill provided for a "dangerous delegation of powers" to the President, and urged that Congress set up a joint security committee to act in an advisory capacity to the President.

GOP 'School' To Stop at Silver Spring

Republicans of Prince Georges, Howard and Montgomery Counties will refresh their political lore August 7 when the GOP's traveling school stops at Silver Spring.

The School of Politics will stop there at the Masonic Building at 5 p.m. as the first in a series of one-night stands in six Free State towns. The goal is to bring Maryland into the Republican column in November by training the grass roots precinct workers.

The institution is directed by a three-man team headed by Bernard L. Lamb of Hohokus, N. J., former campaign manager for Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey. The others are James A. Hogan of Jersey City, who claims credit for helping oust the Hague machine there, and Mrs. Gladys P. Gordon of Washington, Women's Division of the National Committee.

The other stops on the school run in Maryland are Annapolis, August 8; Easton, August 9; Salisbury, August 10; Elkton, August 11, and Towson, August 14.

Guy George Gabrielson, chairman Republican National Committee, said Maryland is the fourth of 15 states in which the school is being held. The first three were Missouri, Oklahoma and Illinois.

The curriculum includes study of the Republican National Committee, campaign target areas, county and precinct organization, registration and voting, State issues, the Republican Statement of Principles, campaign techniques and publicizing the GOP.

Private School Future To Be Discussed on Air

"The Future of Private Schools in the American Educational System" will be the topic of discussion Sunday on the Georgetown University Radio Forum.

The panel which will discuss the subject at 1 p.m., over station WARL, consists of the Rev. William E. McManus, assistant director, Department of Education, National Catholic Welfare Conference, Dr. Robert W. Bolwell, professor of American literature, The George Washington University, and Robert Drinan, S.J., Georgetown University Law School.

Virginia Stores Its Grog for Rainy (Dry) Day

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—The State ABC Board is putting aside an 8 million dollar stock of 275,000 cases of whisky and gin as a reserve against possible war-time restrictions, a spokesman said today.

He added, however, there have been no indications of rationing in the industry or that the industry will not be able to meet the demands of Virginia's State monopoly for some time to come.

"There is absolutely no need for 'scarce buying' or whisky," he declared.

Truman Asks Industry to Expand Capacity

Government should continue and intensify their development of plans for . . . more sweeping controls over the price-wage structure and over the utilization of manpower.

"These efforts should be brought at once to so high a stage of development that, if the need becomes clear, a request to and action by the Congress would enable their immediate application."

There were two other significant new points in the President's report:

The first was a strong hint, if not a definite appeal, for a no-strike pledge from labor. Using strong colloquial language, Mr. Truman said that work stoppages in vital industries "are something we simply cannot afford" in the present emergency situation.

The second was a virtual commitment by the President to see a pay-as-you-go tax program to finance the entire expenses of the enlarged defense effort. So far, the President has asked Congress for a first-installment tax bill that would cover about half of the additional outlay proposed.

100% Coverage Hinted

But the language in yesterday's report suggested that he wanted taxes to cover 100 percent of new spending for everything required short of that needed for a general war.

He declared:

"It will be necessary . . . to raise still additional revenues to avoid a deficit during times when economic policy and budgetary policy call for a balanced budget or a surplus."

Implicit in the President's, and more particularly in the council's, appeal for industry to enlarge production capacity was the thought that no matter how much civilian consumption is curtailed, in certain basic items there is just not enough total production equipment to meet the defense needs.

Doubtless remembering the struggle in 1940 and 1941 to get industry to enlarge its capacity, and its fears—unfounded, as it turned out—of "over capacity," the council argued that the essence of the postwar American economy was continued growth.

A very high and growing level of demand, it said, should be regarded as a "permanent feature" of the economy, which is steadily moving forward at a rate of 9 or 10 billion dollars a year.

Thus, the council said, the long-term demand dictates expansion of capacity, and the only effect of the short-term, immediate military needs "is to make that expansion more urgent."

It urged an expansion of the steel industry, presumably over and above the plans now under way for a 5-million-ingot-ton increase, and said it "would be good business even in an entirely peacetime context."

"There need be no fear that this enlarged productive capacity would become unusable if and when international tensions subside," the council said.

And, the council observed, the heavier defense expenditures now being undertaken will not end merely with a victory in Korea. "There may be other alarms and possibly other attacks, and we must be prepared to meet them no matter how long the period may be before full peace is established," it said.

In his report, the President took time out to denounce the often-heard argument that there is not now the "slack" in the economy to permit added military outlays that there was at the outset of World War II.

The Nation's economy, he assured Congress, "is stronger for whatever tasks lie ahead" than ever before.

It is better that productive capacity has risen so high in the postwar years, because diversion of that capacity to military needs is easier than the building of the capacity from scratch.

Easier to Divert Labor

Furthermore, it is easier to divert labor, though nearly fully employed, to defense work, than to try to bring in hitherto unemployed, untrained workers to defense jobs.

Finally, he argued, thanks to what unemployment now exists and the increase in productivity through the years, it is possible with existing industrial capacity to boost production by 5 percent by the end of this year.

This would raise the index of industrial production from its peacetime high of 199 last month to nearly 210 by December. Meantime, present unemployment of 3½ million would be reduced to 2½ or even 1½ millions.

"Even without an unusual increase in the labor force or in hours of work," Mr. Truman repoted, "the present material and human resources of our economy are sufficient to lift total production by the end of this year to an annual rate about 8 to 10 billion dollars above the current rate.

Billion Guarantee No. Korean Defeat, Allied Leaflets Say

Tokyo, July 26 (U.P.).—Leaflets parachuted from Allied airplanes warned North Korea today that the combined efforts of "over a billion free people" guarantee the defeat of North Korean troops.

"Look to the defeat of North Korean forces," the leaflets said, "because it is surely coming. Now is the time for every patriotic Korean to live for his country and not to die uselessly in a war that only ruins and destroys his country."

The leaflets said that North Korean forces were gaining ground "heedless of the loss of life" while United Nations troops were "not being thrown away in this foolish manner" but were conserving their strength until powerful reinforcements and supplies arrived.

"Soon they will be moving north," the leaflets forecast, and North Korean commanders will cry for the soldiers "they are killing so recklessly now" and will run to the people of North Korea for help.

GOP Lines Up In Fight to Cut Control Plan

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Republican leaders on both sides of the Capitol yesterday organized to modify President Truman's home defense economic control bill in the first crystallization of GOP Party policy on the war-related issue.

In separate meetings, the Senate Republican Policy Committee and its GOP counterpart in the House reached almost identical conclusions that some of the proposed powers should be cut back.

The Senate group called on the Senate Banking Committee to delay action on the control bill at least until next week to give minority members time to work out proposed modifications.

Agreed on War Materials

"We unanimously agreed to support allocation of all the materials needed to prosecute the Korean war," Senator Robert A. Taft (R. Ohio) told newsmen after the party huddle in the Senate.

"But some of the proposed overall controls go beyond any necessity. If we put them in this bill they are likely to be with us the rest of our lives."

Earlier, House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R. Mass.), after a similar conference with his House party policy committee, also pronounced the powers "too broad."

"We've been asked to approve powers greater than those necessary to win World Wars I and II, said Martin. "Unless they can show where all of this authority is needed, we will try to modify them."

The GOP high command decision to try to cut back some of the controls collided with views expressed by Bernard M. Baruch and some others on both sides of the aisle that the President did not go far enough. Some Republicans predicted privately that the cutback drive is doomed to defeat.

Conflict on Tax Plan

The same behind-the-scenes conflict developed around the President's call for five billion dollars in additional income taxes on individuals and corporations, underlined in Mr. Truman's midyear economic report to Congress yesterday.

Republican leaders generally supported the "principle" of a tax increase to finance rearmament and help curb inflation, but mostly refrained from a specific indorsement of Mr. Truman's detailed proposals. They called for sharper reductions in nondefense spending to go hand-in-glove with any tax increase granted.

Several leading Democrats at the same time took the view that the President should have gone further and recommended an excess-profits tax now. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), said he may go before the Senate Finance Committee to recommend imposition of a profits tax, based on a bill he previously sponsored.

Across the Capitol, Representative Herman P. Eberharter (R., Pa.), said a number of House Democrats are trying to find a way to get the excess-profits-tax issue before the House. Under the present plan to tie the President's tax proposals to the House-passed tax-excise-cut bill in the Senate, the House will be virtually bypassed.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.), on the other hand, took the view that there is no need for an excess-profits tax now, that the added levy can be approved in January if necessary.

shirts, sport shirts, pajamas, neckwear and collars against any price increase until after Christmas.

Second was the news that pork chops had gone down from 10 to as much as 30 cents a pound in some cities. Refusal by housewives to pay the recent high prices for pork, was credited for this change.

Prices of many commodities reached new 1950 highs on the Nation's exchanges, but the high levels attracted selling, and closing quotations were generally below the day's top.

Among those that hit the season's new highs were cotton, cottonseed oil at New York; wool, wool tops, lard, soybeans, corn, rye and December oats at Chicago.

Rubber futures jumped the daily limit at one time, and finished as much as 1¼ cents a pound higher. Old raw hides were up from .24 to .7 of a cent. Coffee climbed as much as 1¼ cents.

At one time cotton was $5.25 a bale—more than a cent a pound—ahead. It closed $2 to $3.70 a bale (500 pounds) higher. Wool futures were up 1 to 2 cents a pound, and wool tops up as much as 2 cents. Cocoa again was up almost a cent a pound. Soybeans were up from 3¾ to 5⅛ cents a bushel. Wheat, corn and oats were fractionally lower.

Tin, zinc, copper and lead made moderate gains.

War scare buying of many items continued. Sugar sales, particularly, were far above normal. One leading sugar broker, Lamborn and Company, urged that grocers limit sales to one pound to a customer because hoarding buying has created an artificial shortage.

Although the most pronounced price increases have come since June 25, when the Korean War started, food prices had been on a steady rise since last Februray, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported.

The retail cost of food for a family of three, reached the basis of $635 a year, BAE said, last May. In February the cost was running at an average of about $611 a year. In other words, the food that cost $50.50 in February cost $52.91 in May, BAE said.

The American farmer got only a small part of that increase, however. The BAE figures show that of the $2.41 cents increase, the farmer got 90 cents; the rest, $1.51, went to increased marketing costs.

In fact, of each $1 spent by Americans for retail food, the farmer got only 47 cents in May, BAE said. In April he got 48 cents out of each retail dollar.

In Newark, N. J., a large chain boosted the price of hot dogs from 10 to 12 cents. Restaurants raised coffee from 5 to 10 cents.

If the A-Bomb hit Washington—

What are your chances in an atomic attack? Collier's believes that the first step in solving a problem is to understand it. Not to frighten, but to enlighten, it is publishing HIROSHIMA, USA, a realistic account of an imaginary A-bombing of New York. It could just as well be Washington.

WHAT would a great city be like in the hours and days following an atom bombing?

Today, Collier's pictures, with stark realism, the destruction and horror, the panic and paralysis, that would grip New York after such a holocaust.

Based on what did happen in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, this carefully documented account uses actual names of people, places, buildings, lending grim reality to a nightmare that could come true . . . in any American city.

As the story opens, it is late afternoon on a typically torrid summer day. The big clock on the south wall of Cooper Union says thirteen minutes after five, when . . .

> Ten miles away, bathers at Coney Island saw the flash and mistook it for a lightning bolt. Eight miles in the opposite direction, a Bronx housewife went to the kitchen window to see what caused the light; on the way, the windowpane came to meet her, in thousands of slashing bits. Noticing that she was bleeding, she fainted.

The news services, of course, were crippled. The first flash, sent from Newark, said simply: "An A-bomb fell on the lower East Side of Manhattan Island at 5:13 p.m. today—across the East River from the Brooklyn Navy Yard." That was all the information available at the time.

> The distant details came in first, mostly from radio hams. Windows were broken as far out as Canarsie and Bay Ridge in Brooklyn; Jackson Heights, Long Island City and Forest Hills in Queens; the lower Bronx; north on Manhattan to 149th Street; and on the Jersey side of the Hudson to the fringes of Newark. Closer to the center of the explosion there was silence. More than an hour passed before any of the major facts were known.

Later you'll read:

> Stone parapets pelted into the streets, along with a rain of splintered glass, all the way from Battery Park to Thirty-Sixth Street . . . Fifth Avenue was blocked at a dozen places between No. 1 and Fourteenth Street, where S. Klein's bargain emporium came down on the heads of its milling customers. At Fifteenth Street and Irving Place, the Consolidated Edison Tower was completely wrecked and disruption of its control panels added to the confusion and power failures which followed destruction of the generators at Fourteenth Street and across the river near the Navy Yard . . .
> Death and anguish swept the city . . . Those who were closest to the point of explosion were roasted to death, instantaneously, where they sat . . . The burned, the crushed and the broken—except for the comparatively few thousands who were squeezed into the already crowded hospitals and treated before the available medical supplies were gone—could only lie still and wonder when the bandages would come, what had happened to the morphine and the penicillin, where were the unguent salves and the cooling oils, and why, if they needed blood (as the nurses said they did) the bottles weren't hanging there to feed their thirsty veins.
> . . . One month after the explosion, officials were still totting the damage. Deaths were estimated at 180,000 (the figure went up slightly every day because people who had counted themselves as fortunate survivors were succumbing to their exposure to gamma radiation during that instant of flash); and the number of non-fatal injuries clearly exceeded that figure.

* * *

It didn't happen, of course. It may never happen. But what you have just read, and will read in detail in today's Collier's, is a conservative estimate of the consequences of just one atomic bomb descending on New York.

Is there anything we can do?

The idea of atomic attack on our cities is so terrifying that, until recently, we have been unwilling to face it at all. The government, the armed services, the American people themselves have adopted an almost fatalistic nothing-can-be-done attitude.

Can anything be done?

The fact is, there's a lot that can be done — but only the British are doing it.

Only the British have learned the answers to some of the questions anxious Americans have been asking. Questions like: Must we decentralize our cities? How serious is the danger from radioactivity? Where is the safest part of your house?

To get the answers for Collier's readers, Associate Editor John Lear crossed the Atlantic and attended the Home Office Civil Defense School, the first American to do so.

What he learned can be summed up in his encouraging report that "The British believe it possible to prevent 75% or more of the death, injury and horror the A-bombs wrought in Japan."

Collier's believes that only by learning the truth, however grave, can we prepare an adequate defense against the most terrible menace mankind has ever faced. That is why it is publishing HIROSHIMA, USA, written by John Lear after more than three months spent in research and in consultation with the highest authorities on the subject.

Read HIROSHIMA, USA, in Collier's, on all newsstands today.

DON'T HOARD

Despite the fighting in Korea, there are no shortages — no immediate prospect of any. Let's not be silly.

Among advertising men, Collier's is regarded as the most progressive magazine in the multimillion field today. That's what you'd find if you polled the advertising leaders — as Collier's did. And this top professional opinion is reflected everywhere. More people are buying and reading Collier's than ever before. More advertisers are buying more advertising space and getting more for their advertising dollars. More and more you hear: "You can't afford to miss Collier's."

Maryland Plan To Pay Doctors Starts Sept. 1

Baltimore, July 26 (AP).—September 1 is the opening date for the new system of prepaid insurance for doctors' bills to be launched by Maryland Medical Service, Inc.

Subscribers of the Maryland Hospital Service—known as Blue Cross—will be offered the insurance first. Some 40 percent of Maryland's residents have Blue Cross coverage.

Blue Cross pays hospital bills. The new service, to be known as Blue Shield, will pay at least a part of physicians' and surgeons' fees.

Doctors will receive a standard fee for treating those subscribing families with an income below $3600 a year. Higher-income families may be billed added charges by the surgeons and practitioners, though the medical service will pay the standard fees.

Field Artillery And Infantry Journals Unite

Two professional service journals have been merged into the Combat Forces Journal, to be published monthly by the Association of the United States Army as a private, nonprofit educational enterprise.

The merging journals are the Infantry Journal, published since 1904 by the United States Infantry Association and the Field Artillery Journal, published since 1910 by the United States Field Artillery Association.

The merger had its origin in the idea that modern warfare requires soldiers of each combat arm to keep pace with the development of other combat arms.

Colonel Joseph I. Greene, Infantry, Retired, is secretary and general manager of the new association and editor of the Combat Forces Journal. Offices of the association and the journal will be at 1115 Seventeenth st. nw.

Foreign Affairs Officer's Wife Shoots Self

The despondent wife of a State Department foreign affairs specialist shot herself to death early yesterday in her apartment at 1028 Connecticut ave.

Mrs. Myna Stevens, 43, was found on the living room floor, a bullet through her head, at 8 a. m., by her 14-year-old daughter, Myna.

The daughter had been awakened by her father, Col. Eli Stevens, pounding on the door.

Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Police said that the Stevens had been separated and that the wife and daughter had recently arrived to visit Colonel Stevens from Houston, Tex.

A note addressed "Dear Steve" on the living room desk indicated Mrs. Stevens had become despondent and "tired," police said.

Dr. MacDonald said the woman had placed the gun in her mouth. Stevens told police that the gun was a foreign-make automatic he had sent his wife as a souvenir from overseas during the last war.

Stevens said he had taken his family for a drive Tuesday night and made an appointment to have breakfast with them yesterday morning. He told police his wife had seemed "unusually quiet" but otherwise normal. He said she had once been in Walter Reed General Hospital after an earlier suicide attempt, and also had been in a Houston hospital after suffering a nervous breakdown, police reported.

Quiz on County Government Under Fire

A 55-point questionnaire mailed to Fairfax County groups to get their views as to what may be the best form of county government, was described as "loosely stated," "confused," and "repetitious" yesterday by the Fairfax League of Women Voters.

The League yesterday mailed its answers to most of the 55 questions to a special 21-members commission, appointed by the Fairfax Board of Supervisors, which is studying the problem.

The special commission is studying, among other governmental forms, the county manager system under which members of the governing body would be elected at-large.

The present system "is one of under-representation of the majority," the League said, and is "quite contrary to democratic principles."

At the same time, the Committee for Good Government of Fairfax County called on the Board of Supervisors to "speak up, publicly and now," and give its views on the county manager system.

The board "has taken no stand for the record," a committee letter to the commission said. It charged some of the board members with having launched a whispering campaign against the county manager proposal.

Senate Confirms Peurifoy Envoy; No Opposition

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of John E. Peurifoy to be United States Ambassador to Greece. There was no opposition.

Peurifoy has been Assistant Secretary of State for Administration. He has had charge of the department's loyalty and security program and has been under fire from Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.).

McCarthy, who has charged that the State Department is infiltrated with Communists, was not on the floor when the Senate approved Peurifoy.

He will be succeeded as Assistant Secretary by Carlisle H. Humelsine of Maryland, who likewise won confirmation without opposition.

C. Tyler Wood also was confirmed as an Ambassador. Wood, an Economic Cooperation Administration official, will be a special United States representative in Europe for the Marshall Plan.

Negro Specialist

Caliver to Aid U. S. Director Of Education

Dr. Ambrose Caliver, 56, who in 1930 became the first Federal Government specialist in Negro education, yesterday was appointed assistant to United States Commissioner of Education.

The veteran educator has been serving as specialist for the higher education of Negroes and adviser on related problems.

Over a period of years, Dr. Caliver has served on numerous commissions concerned with the improvement of Negro education. He is a United Nations adviser and a year ago toured Europe to conduct a study for the Displaced Persons Commission.

He was at one time a dean at Fisk University, and has held visiting professorships at Hudson Junior College, Miner Teachers College, Hampton Institute, Knoxville College, and Howard University. He lives at 1210 Tamont st. nw.

Gunman Robs Cleaning Store Manager of $13

The manager of the Aristo Cleaners store at 2408 14th st., was robbed at gunpoint of $13 shortly after noon yesterday.

Goldye Prager told police the robbers took the money from the cash drawer and her purse.

She said the man put his hand in her face, told her to turn around and escaped.

Police broadcast a lookout for a six foot, 200 pound Negro, wearing a maroon sport shirt and a gray cap.

Drunken Drivers Liable, Even Off Highways

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—A person may be arrested for drunken driving even though the offense does not occur on a State highway, Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., held today.

Almond's opinion was written in response to an inquiry by Charles G. Stone, Commonwealth's attorney for Fauquier County. Stone asked if it is a violation of the State code for a person, while intoxicated, to drive an automobile in a filling station bordering a public highway.

Dr. Peckham Held in New Abortion Case

Dr. Henry L. Peckham was arraigned yesterday on charges of criminally aborting a 30-year-old unmarried secretary typist.

Twice tried and twice acquitted of similar charges, Peckham was released under $3500 bond by U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. A hearing was continued until August 16.

Police arrested Peckham at 10 a.m., yesterday as he was ascending the steps of the typist's home.

Unknown to the doctor, police said, the woman had been taken to Gallinger Hospital nine hours earlier, suffering from "severe abdominal pains." Her condition was reported as "good," after a miscarriage occurred.

The woman's sister called the District Medical Bureau yesterday. A doctor, who responded immediately, notified police and sent the woman to Gallinger.

There, she told Detective Sergeants Lloyd Furr and A. D. Clark, she had been aborted Monday night by Dr. Peckman in his office at 428 8th st. se. She told police she was charged $300.

Dr. Peckham called the woman twice Tuesday, police said, and arranged to visit her yesterday morning. Furr and Clark were waiting for him.

At the arraignment, Lawrence first set bond at $5000. Dr. Peckham objected, telling Lawrence the last time he had been arraigned the bond was only $2000. Lawrence then reduced bond to $3500 and granted the doctor's request for a continuance to obtain counsel.

Dr. Peckham was tried and acquitted in January, 1948, of performing an abortion on a 23-year-old government stenographer, and was tried and acquitted in March of 1948 of performing an abortion on a 37-year-old woman.

He lives at 640 Princeton pl. nw.

Baby Beating Trial Delayed

Trial of Fred Hensley, jr., Arlington painter charged with beating his five-months-old daughter, was continued yesterday to July 28. Two bad check charges against him also were continued for trial.

Judge Paul D. Brown, Arlington County Court, said a commission to determine whether Hensley is mentally ill will be ordered in the meantime.

A preliminary hearing, Tuesday was interrupted when Hensley, 22, of 1226 N. Nelson st., Arlington, collapsed. He was taken to Arlington Hospital in unconscious condition, but later was remanded to the jail.

Free World Unity

The accumulating offers of ground troops to fight against aggression in Korea are a new source of hope for the free world. These offers have been slow in coming, but one reason may have been a general assumption that the troops sent by the United States would readily stop the invaders. The continued forward drives of the aggressors have now brought an awakening in other free lands as well as in our own.

It is of the greatest political importance, as Secretary Acheson pointed out, that a considerable number of countries are now beginning to invest military units and equipment in the Korean venture launched by the Security Council.

Great Britain's promise to send "an effective land reinforcement, including infantry, armor, artillery and engineers," follows commitments by Turkey to send 4500 trained combat troops and Thailand to send 4000 soldiers. Bolivia had previously offered 30 officers, and Cuba promised a limited force. Both Australia and New Zealand will soon be in the fight with ground troops. And now that the necessity for unity of the free world in actual fighting as well as in spirit has been so thoroughly demonstrated, these pledges ought to be followed by the dispatch of troops from many other lands.

Undoubtedly the mingling of soldiers from so many countries will create a difficult problem for General MacArthur. But the joint participation of fighting men from every continent will maintain the truly international character of this action—a point that is imperative to any undertaking under the auspices of the United Nations. Now is the time for the free world to rally to the support of its principles. "The best answer to communism," Wendell Willkie said in One World, "is a living, vibrant, fearless democracy—economic, social, and political. All we need to do is to stand up and perform according to our professed ideals. Then those ideals will be safe." Standing up and performing according to our professed ideals today means free-world unity in coping with Communist aggression. It is as foolish to suppose that aggression can be suppressed without that unity as it would be to suppose that the Korean tanks can be stopped without weapons.

Civilian CIA

President Truman is reported to be strongly considering the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith as the new director of the Central Intelligence Agency. We have the utmost respect for General Smith as an officer of great ability and one of the real intellectuals of the military profession. Nevertheless, we hope that the President will not be persuaded by expediency to appoint another military man to a job which from its inception has needed a civilian director willing to make intelligence a career.

In the first place, General Smith is a sick man, whose precarious health has interfered with his duties as commander of the First Army. He is reliably understood to have said that he does not want the job of director of Central Intelligence and would take it only on presidential order. Such a gruelling assignment, in view of his physical condition, would do him no service. Moreover, General Smith has represented himself as believing that the job should go to a civilian—as, reportedly, has General Bradley.

The incumbent director, Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, has tried hard and faithfully to make CIA an efficient working organization, and in some ways he has succeeded. But despite his earnestness he has been handicapped by two things. First, he is an officer of relatively junior rank and does not enjoy the prestige that begets the confidence of top policy-makers in the Government, particularly in the military services. CIA's tendency to cry "wolf" in its reports and this lack of confidence in it are perhaps its greatest weaknesses. Second, Admiral Hillenkoetter has had the failing of many military men in that in time of stress he has tended to rely principally on other military officers. As a result CIA has acquired an almost impervious military hierarchy.

This is not to say that General Smith would suffer from the same difficulties. Certainly he enjoys prestige. But his primary interest, apart from considerations of health, is in another direction—in his Army career. The compelling need of CIA, stressed at the time the original unification bill was written, is for a man who will remain long enough, without thinking of returning to another career, to give the agency continuity of direction. It is only in this way that a team can be built up and confidence established. No temporary advantage of working relationships with the Pentagon is worth compounding the difficulty that has plagued CIA from the beginning.

Finding a qualified man to take the directorship is not an easy job. It is known that the President has sounded out such men as Robert A. Lovett and David Bruce, who for one reason or another have had to say no. But surely the list of available competent civilians has not been exhausted.

Taxes For Defense

The tax increases recommended by the President would fall far short of producing enough revenue to balance the budget. They would, however, neutralize the inflationary effect of rising military expenditures that would add to the size of the deficit before Congress was ready to enact long-range legislation. Arguments have been advanced in favor of postponing tax increases until the size of the defense spending program can be estimated with a greater approach to accuracy. But this is specious reasoning, because it is certain that the military program will entail heavy outlays for the indefinite future and any taxes voted now will have to be supplemented by further tax increases.

The old adage that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure applies with special force to proposals for curbing price increases. The across-the-board percentage increases in income taxes recommended by the President not only make quick preventive action possible; they also have the added advantage of putting pressure on lower income groups where most of the taxpayers and the taxable income are concentrated. Fiscal policy is a powerful control instrumentality when it is employed to mop up excess purchasing power in this fashion. In the present instance, moreover, it can be applied with assurance that the increased tax burden will not entail too great sacrifices. For the proposed increases would merely eliminate most—not all—of the postwar cuts made in individual income taxes. And it is worth noting that during the war years per capita disposable personal income was lower than at present.

The President's recommendations as to corporation taxes call for a 4 percent increase in the rates carried in the tax bill passed by the House, which revised and improved the existing corporate rate structure. Consequently this section of the bill cannot be regarded as a hasty improvisation. The corporation tax increases are expected to produce an additional 1.5 billion dollars of revenue—much less, without doubt, than will eventually be required and a comparatively modest levy in view of the flourishing state of business. The proposal to impose these additional taxes on all 1950 income, however, is, as Senator George says, "highly controversial"—in our opinion, inadvisable—since it would entail retroactive taxation of earnings and create serious problems for some companies. Elimination of excise tax reductions and retention of the provisions for closing loopholes carried in the House tax bill would also serve the dual purpose of bringing in revenue and restraining spending.

The President summed up the case for his interim tax program by saying, "Substantial tax increases now are called for by the requirements of sound budget policy and by the threat of inflation. The general business situation makes this feasible." He might have added that the present high level of production and national income makes it imperative to strike at the root causes of inflation by taxing away excess purchasing power and curbing credit. Otherwise direct price controls and rationing at the retail level will be the inevitable alternative; and meantime irreparable damage would be done by deficit-produced inflation.

Inadequate Stockpiles

It comes as something of a shock to realize that after nearly four years of stockpiling of strategic materials the program is only 38.4 percent complete—or, with current orders, 50.6 percent. The Munitions Board offers two factors in extenuation—the difficulty in acquiring materials at reasonable prices in time of prosperity and the delays in obtaining appropriations. Regardless of the explanation, the deficiency is serious.

Some careful thinking must nevertheless precede any plan such as the Administration is now considering to request funds to double the stockpiling rate. It would be reassuring to think that the United States could now buy and store all the materials it might need in case of all-out war. But some sources of production are limited, and in our own interest we cannot afford to strip bare the rest of the world and hoard materials other countries need. In some countries increased stockpiling purchases would interfere with the use of critical materials to build up their military establishments. And, thinking of first things first, it may be more important to have, say, guns in the hands of the French than additional strategic materials in this country.

Moreover, while additional stockpiling might mean a bonanza to some countries, notably in Latin America, it would cause economic dislocations in others. If production of strategic materials is limited, then stepped-up purchases by this country would have to compete with local industry. Not only might this result in severe inflation; it also could play hob with the ECA program and general economic recovery.

There is, however, one area into which more vigorous stockpiling efforts could be directed immediately with constructive effect. That is in the expansion of sources of production—an expansion which also would bestow dollar benefits on the countries concerned. For example, with the Mesabi Range almost played out, it is more than apparent that the United States needs additional sources of iron ore. The two most promising sources are Labrador and Venezuela; but the development of facilities there will require both time and money. It could be speeded up with help from the United States. Although some ECA funds have been spent in Africa, a great deal more could be done to explore new sources and expand production of important items there. Jute, the production of which has been declining since the Indo-Pakistan dispute over Kashmir, may well become an extremely critical item demanding additional attention.

Flexibility must be the keynote of the stockpiling program. There may be materials such as rubber which the United States would want to purchase heavily, irrespective of other considerations, to deny them to Russia. But a sound program requires more than money alone. It must be conducted with the utmost selectivity, with an eye not only on the benefits to the United Sates but also on the effects on the rest of the world.

Mr. Menzies' Visit

Robert Gordon Menzies, Australia's Prime Minister, will have a warm popular as well as official welcome when he arrives in Washington today. He paid a memorable visit to us in May, 1941—in the darkest days of the German blitz attack on Britain. Speaking at the National Press Club on a day immediately after the Luftwaffe had bombed the Houses of Parliament, he conveyed a stirring sense of British fortitude, expressed an awareness that was then only beginning to be felt here of America's, as well as Australia's, stake in the symbols of western civilization and of human liberty that were being threatened with obliteration in London. "I am not going to talk to you about your business, as that may be considered distinct from mine," he said, "but about our business—that of maintaining liberty in a very dark and stormy world."

No doubt he will discuss the same subject now. Australians and Americans are once more intimately engaged in the common business of maintaining liberty. More promptly, more generously and more effectively than any other country, Australia has given her strength in support of the American troops carrying the principal burden of resistance to aggression in Korea. Australian warships have served in close collaboration with the United States Seventh Fleet. Australian planes have been flying daily sorties against the Communist invaders. It has just been announced that Australian ground forces will soon be on hand to bolster the American contingent. Australia is not geographically much closer to Korea than are the United States and Canada. But under the leadership of Prime Minister Menzies, Australia shares with the United States a live awareness of her closeness to the issues that are involved in Korea.

Australia is a continental island with a population of no more than about seven million—very much like the people of this country in attitude and outlook. She has at last undertaken, as the United States did a century ago, to stimulate her growth by immigration. The Australians are said to be ready to welcome immigrants at the rate of some 200,000 a year. The project is a tremendous one that stirs the imagination. It can prove of much utility in solving Europe's refugee and resettlement problem—a problem in which the United States is directly concerned. If Mr. Menzies wants to discuss dollar aid, or any other kind of aid, for the major construction effort his country will have to make for this heavy influx, he should be listened to with quick sympathy.

There will be continuing need for close collaboration between the United States and Australia in dealing with the tough problems of the Pacific and particularly of southeast Asia. Here is an area where Point 4 aid can be of tremendous value. The subject should be canvassed while the Prime Minister is here. His visit is a happy augury of enduring partnership between his country and our own in the pursuit of "our common business."

Successful Women

Every time we go to a movie or pick up a fiction magazine we seem to run into the combination glamour girl and business success. Usually under 30, a bathing beauty and a clothes model in appearance, she is also a topnotcher in her business or profession, always talking on several telephones at once or dashing from conference to conference. This has been upsetting to our cherished tradition that the road to success was paved with hard work, determined struggle and long patience. It has also suggested that women were getting preternaturally smart.

Hence with some relief we learn from the new study of top-bracket women in Federal jobs, made by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, that few brilliant or even highly successful feminine careers in Government are achieved before the age of 45; that a woman is judged a pretty good success story by that time if she is earning between $6400 and $7400; that the top salary achievers usually have a big store of education, special training and experience.

Now it may be that all this is the fault of bureaucrats who may discriminate against women. Or it may be, as we hear constantly, "you can't get anywhere in Government." But we think it likely that a survey of women in private industry—outside of Hollywood—would also give the woman of 45 or past the big breaks. Hereafter we are going to take the movie and magazine success girls with the same grain of salt we administer when we encounter a fictional newspaper reporter.

Arming Germany

Is it safe to rely on atom bombs for the defense of Europe against Soviet armies? What is likely to happen when the Soviet has a sufficient supply of atom bombs and what should we do to anticipate the probable danger? Already the Communists are making a great propaganda drive against the nation which shall be first to use the atom bomb.

As the number of atom bombs grows and fear grows with them and the volume of propaganda against their use swells, Stalin may reasonably argue that, in about two years' time, when he has a large stock of atom bombs, it will be safe, with his vast armies, to occupy Europe, Africa and Asia without being attacked with atom bombs by the United States.

Now, there is practically nothing but fear of atom bombs to prevent the Soviet armies from invading and enslaving Europe. In two years' time this fear may not prevent them, in view of the probable opposition in the United States and elsewhere to the use of the bombs.

There is still, perhaps, time to avert the danger of invasion, without the use of the dreaded atom bombs, if the Western nations, immediately, establish a sufficient army behind the Elbe, making full use of the manpower of all western Europe, including western Germany.

It may be that certain people in Western Europe are afraid to rearm Western Germany, but the number of those who realize that the danger from a rearmed Germany is a small risk, compared with the imminent threat of a Russian invasion, must be growing.

It may, too, be argued that to arm West Germany now would provoke the USSR into commencing a war immediately. Stalin is unlikely to move while the United States has such a vast superiority in atom bombs, but if he should commence a war now, it seems probable that he would be defeated by atom bombs and the danger of more widespread atomic warfare later.

There is no time to lose. If we do not have, within two years' time, at least 50 well armed divisions in west Europe we face a very grave risk of destruction or enslavement. It may be said that the cost of defense is too high, but what is the cost of 50 divisions compared with the the cost of losing western Europe with all its wealth and the treasures of its ancient civilization.

"Stockholm Appeal"

Your July 19 editorial, "Stockholm Appeal," which misrepresents the campaign to outlaw atomic weapons cannot go unanswered.

The best answer to your editorial is the letter of Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, chairman of the Peace Information Center, to Secretary of State Dean Acheson replying to his attack on the World Peace Appeal. I quote Dr. DuBois's letter in part:

"The main burden of your opposition to this appeal and other efforts toward peace lies in the charge that proposals to outlaw atomic warfare, as the Geneva Convention outlaws gas, and the World Peace Appeal stems from Communist sources, are the 'propaganda tricks in the spurious peace offensive of the Soviet Union,' and persons signing this appeal are either Communists or gullible fools.

"The best answer to these assertions is to list a few of the great minds and figures of our times who with more than 200,000,000 ordinary men and women who want peace, have signed their names to the World Peace Appeal. George Bernard Shaw; Arnold Zweig; former President Cardenas of Mexico; former Premier Vittorio Orlando of Italy (who was one of the Big Four at Versailles); Cavaldo Aranha, Brazilian statesman and former president of the U. N. General Assembly; M. Mongibeaux, Chief Justice of the French Supreme Court; M. Mornet, Attorney General of France; Dr. Sholem Treistman, chief rabbi of Poland; Edouard Herriot, president of the French Senate and former Premier; Mme. Sun Yat-sen; Jose Bergamin, renowned Catholic philosopher; Cardinal Sapieha, Roman Catholic Primate of Poland—these are but a few of the great names in other countries.

"Nobel Peace Prize winner, Emily Greene Balch, in signing declared: 'A statement like the World Peace Appeal is essentially important at this time because it cuts across all ideological and political lines and merits the support of all those who want peace, regardless of any other differences among them.'"

The Progressive Party supports any means of a peaceful solution of international difficulties. We support the Stockholm World Peace Appeal, the International Red Cross statement to outlaw atomic weapons and all other efforts in this direction.

Program For Peace

When such brilliant and diverse thinkers as Winston Churchill, Bernard Baruch, General Eisenhower, General Marshall, Senator Vandenberg, General Sarnoff, Senator McMahon, John Foster Dulles, Senator Mundt, Walter Reuther, and the editorial staff of The Washington Post agree on a matter, we know that something drastic must have brought them together. Within the last three weeks, all of these people—and many others of widely differing views—have come out in favor of a vital, unified peace plan.

General Eisenhower speaks of "a general staff for peace." Senator Vandenberg suggests a "Marshall Plan of Ideas." Senator Benton and 13 other Senators sponsoring a bill for "selling" the world on America's program of peace and democracy. Senator Mundt has introduced a bill "to establish a commission on cooperative international relations."

We are all ready, or so it is claimed, to gear this country quickly to all-out war, if necessary. Are we equally prepared with a total peace program, well-staffed with men as devoted and as capable as our war leaders? As soon as the Korean incident is successfully ended, we should be ready with a fully implemented peace program. We should have a plan to counteract the phony "Partisans of Peace" drive.

Blows For Libetry

Why don't you propose that real blows for liberty be struck on the Liberty Bell by requiring that the person striking must first buy a war bond?

"Censuring McCarthy"

Your July 21 editorial, "Censuring McCarthy," shows that at least one paper in Washington has the courage, honesty and sense of duty to call a spade a spade.

The fraud and deceit as practiced by McCarthy against this Government and fellow citizens is an all too-popular approach for many editors, politicians and others in Washington. Even Senator Tydings has been castigated in Congress and in the press because he had the courage and intelligence to brand a lie a lie.

Your able editorial defense of Senator Tydings and his subcommittee, and justifiable censure of Senator McCarthy, is a long step toward keeping the public from loss of faith in the free press of America.

The way the Senate Republicans lined up behind Senator McCarthy after Senator Tydings exposed him as a "fraud and a hoax," explains to me why the Republicans have not won a major election since 1928.

ANTI-COMMUNIST.
Rockville, Md.

What a bad day it is for America when Senators vote by party bloc on so crucial an issue as the Tydings report. What excuse can ever be made for those who drafted the Smith declaration and then voted as merely Republicans? To what can we look for justice and peace for the world if not to the belief that the truth is the same for all, and that when it is exposed, all honorable men who see it as such will support it, no matter what its source? If Senators in this free country will not rise above their personal interests and partisan loyalties when truth itself is on trial, it won't take Stalin long to put out the light of freedom; we shall have done it ourselves.

Questions On Korea

Our action in Korea has posed many crucial questions. To put off the answers is to invite disaster.

If the Chinese back up the Koreans in force, are we willing and able to pursue the matter to the point of invading China? If we find war in Asia goes against us, do we intend to use "the bomb" on Asia's millions? If so, are we prepared to occupy and rehabilitate the conquered and devastated areas? Also, are we prepared to contend with the active hatred of Asia's millions, and the fear and mistrust of the rest of the world?

In the meantime, what about conflict at other points in the world? If we cannot cope with a dozen fires at once, on what basis does Korea have priority? Should America become widely involved in the Pacific, what becomes of the Atlantic community?

Then, of course, there is the home front. Are the American people willing and able to support another war with severe sacrifices that will be necessary—confiscatory taxes, rigid controls over every phase of life, and further depletion of natural resources?

Will not another war arrest the progress of democracy, social services and domestic reform?

Do we want to prove the superiority of our arms or the superiority of the democratic idea? Which is more apt to capture the hearts and minds of men? If the idea is our best defense and strongest weapon, should we not develop and expand the idea at home and abroad by every measure at our command?

We must answer these questions before we allow ourselves to be stampeded into an all-out war. Then it will be too late.

Living With Uncertainty

By Malvina Lindsay

Future Family Pattern

LIFE HAS changed for many an American family in the last few weeks. And President Truman's rearmament message assures there will be no returning soon to the good old stable day of June 23—the eve of the North Korean attack.

True, there was plenty of uncertainty before that. But there was enough postwar jellying down that plans could be made for tomorrow—even by young men. Now families are just beginning to realize what the projected mobilization of the free world is going to mean to them personally.

It will mean higher taxes, sacrifices, denials, the shelving of many long-term plans and investments.

Of more importance, it will mean breaks in the family circle, youths enlisting or being drafted, older men preparing for call in reserves or National Guard. For manpower now has to take over one thing the atom bomb could not do—police far-flung areas where the Nation's security is threatened.

This rearmament also will mean a step-up in production of military supplies, hence recruiting and shifting of skilled workers and administrators.

The whole picture is one of indefinite future mobility for many a household. More moving vans will rumble along highways. More American youths will be getting acquainted with foreign scenes. Mobilization marriage, already in a spurt, will probably increase. So will mobilization babies.

FAR GREATER change would come should total war develop. But the present trend of the world power struggle seems toward outpost action, as in Korea. Hence households, like the Nation, are gearing themselves to such a pattern. No one can tell how long these years of crisis, years in which mass conflict could be precipitated—or prevented—will continue. Both families and individuals have to arm inwardly to live in uncertainty.

Long before the Korean outbreak sociologists were saying that the old static family life was disappearing, chiefly owing to industrialism. Now armed camp life makes the family less institutional in a material sense.

It also presents such social problems as more absent fathers, with greater responsibility on mothers; the need of accelerated maturity for youth, likely to be sent at an early age to distant camps and countries; the need on the part of children for quick adaptation to surroundings; greater preventive action against delinquency, now of world-wide concern because of global social unrest; the probable increase of working mothers; the social reapings of hasty marriages; the general anxiety that prolonged uncertainty develops.

HOW CAN the family be helped to adapt to this?

In a way it is not unprepared. For some time now it has been conditioning itself to a mobile existence. The depression and the last war drove home the lesson that security must lie with the individual rather than in his living room suite or even his ancestral portraits.

This situation was emphasized at the recent annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association in Boston. Much discussion throughout the sessions centered about the human aspects of family living. This trend from the material to the intangible, it was brought out, had developed largely from the impact of events of the last 30 years.

Also recently at a conference on home management at Cornell University parents were advised to develop personality rather than material services, to build family life more strongly around human relationships, to give children in a world of material change an anchor of stability not dependent on place or things.

We long ago gave up the buttress of the three- and even two-generation homestead. Now it looks as if many of us might be jogged out of the comfortable little rut of short-term possessions and planning into which we had settled so happily since the war.

Pathetic? So it may seem. But possibly another step on the long, long road to possession of our mental Canaan's land.

Yet in the mental and emotional adjustments ahead many will need help—parents especially so. Religion, science, education need to prepare now to give more community aid to people being thrown increasingly back upon themselves.

Alsop Blasts

Isn't it about time the Alsops muted their daily double against Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson?

I haven't kept score, but my impression is that they have taken a shot at him in almost every column. If they were writing about the Day of Resurrection they would charge that Johnson beat the gun in getting out of his grave. Or with gumming up the whole works by creeping.

It is no secret, of course, that they are trying to force him out of his position. Well, that's politics. That's all right. I have no complaint. But, after all, the man does know his business; no one knows it better or is more fearless in doing it; and we are in a war.

Would the rest of us suffer if the Alsops were to pipe down?

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

After The Present Phase

SINCE the North Koreans broke through the Kum River line it has been most probable that the best we could hope for in the months to come was to hold a small bridgehead around the port of Pusan. At the Kum River line it was shown that the South Korean army could not hold even if assisted by American air and naval forces and by what the President in his fateful announcement of June 30 called "certain supporting ground units" that General MacArthur was authorized to use.

Lippmann

The Kum River battle showed that the American Army would have to do much more than the words "supporting ground units" implied. The American Army would have to fight the Korean war, using the remnants of the South Korean army as supporting ground units. After that, excluding miracles, it was a mathematical certainty that the area which could be held would be small. For General MacArthur has only three divisions, non- at anything like full strength. It is usually assumed, I believe, that one division can screen—which is different from holding in force—no more than a front of 30 miles. If General MacArthur can stabilize a semicircle 100 miles long with Pusan at the center, he will have achieved a remarkable result with the small forces he commands.

WE HAVE no right to count upon anything better than that and we must be prepared for the possibility that Pusan may not be held. In either event, whether we consolidate a bridgehead in Korea or are pushed back to Japan, many months must pass before the Army can take the offensive. Very much larger and stronger forces than are now available in the Far East will have to be assembled in the United States and put ashore in Korea.

The period of time between the end of this defensive campaign and the beginning of the counteroffensive will present grave questions which we must now begin to define, even though none is able as yet to see what are the best solutions.

WE MUST begin by recognizing that it is optimistic to assume that we shall be allowed the undisturbed time necessary to prepare the offensive back to the thirty-eighth parallel. The forces at the disposal of the Communist world on the Eurasian continent are enormous and the opportunities open to them are varied. It is most unlikely that they will do nothing while we mount the amphibious operation in Japan for the recovery of South Korea.

It seems probable, however, that the Russians will use all their ingenuity to exclude a diplomatic solution of the Korean affair and to keep us nailed to the task of concentrating wholly on a military solution. For while they possess the means of frustrating a military solution and of containing the eventual counteroffensive, the months of preparation which we must have open to them great political advantages which they are most likely to exploit.

ON THE one hand, there will be the terrible but inescapable fact that in order to reoccupy South Korea to the thirty-eighth parallel we shall have to destroy by air bombardment all the principal cities and the main public utilities and industries of North and South Korea. There is, on the other hand, the hard fact that when we land and counterattack, the North Korean Communists will have had many months' time in which to reunite the artifically divided country, to carry out the land reforms, and to liquidate the reactionaries who have dominated the government of Syngman Rhee. At the worst we shall find the mass of the people regarding us as foreign invaders. At the best, as against those who welcome us as liberators, we must count on carefully trained and fanatically indoctrinated guerilla bands which have been organized in the Korean mountains during the lull between the two campaigns.

In this connection I should like to quote Peter Fleming, who each week has been writing a military critique for the Spectator (London). "The harder one tries to look ahead into the conflict, the more important (to my mind) do the Koreans themselves become. In theory, the South Koreans, groaning under the knout of their conquerors, will be pining for a glimpse of the blue and white United Nations pennants on the liberating tanks. But will this be so in practice? I doubt it. Elections, even if they are rigged; land reforms, even if they cause some hardship; above all, the consciousness that their country is united and free of overt foreign domination (except for a few square miles) for the first time for two generations—these are factors which are bound to harden the hearts of the South Koreans against their would-be rescuers. Add to them the bitterness which bombing always breeds, the bad smell which a defeated army cannot help leaving behind, and a natural resentment—deeper than any they may have acquired for the methods of their new rulers—against the foreigners who propose to use their country for a battlefield in order to reimpose on it an artificial division into two parts; and then see how you like the wicket on which the United Nations forces will have—on the present form—to open their second innings—it looks to me equally sticky from both the political and the military points of view."

MR. FLEMING may be wrong. But he knows a lot more than most about war, especially about war inside Asia. The more one studies the history of Korea since 1945, the more probable it seems, at least to me, that he is is right. I might add for what it is worth that the oftener I reread the Nehru-Stalin-Acheson documents, the more I begin to wonder whether Stalin is not very pleased that Acheson insisted on a military decision and the unconditional retreat of the North Koreans.

Usually, when the aggressor is winning military victories, it is quite a problem for him to push aside the mediators who might break his momentum and stop him short of his victories. It might have been quite awkward for Stalin if he had been asked to bring about a cease-fire to be followed by negotiations in the United Nations. But as Mr. Acheson played the game, Stalin could let the negotiations fail without having to take all the responsibility for making them fail. It would have been much better, I think, to answer Stalin's terms, which he must have known we could not accept, by inviting negotiations that would have been hard for him to refuse.

In the period after the present defense campaign and while the counteroffensive is being mounted, the Korean war as such will be primarily a political war. Let us be sure that we do not deprive ourselves of all the instruments of political warfare which are to be found in the practice of the ancient but neglected art of diplomacy.

Why We're Fighting

By Marquis Childs

Need For Troop Understanding

SO MUCH has been said about a propaganda of truth to be directed by America at the peoples of the world. This would be an antidote to the campaign of falsehood and slander carried on by Communists everywhere.

Childs

The need for this is so urgent and so obvious that it is hard to see how any American can stand in the way of it. But there appears to be need, at least as urgent, to tell our own troops who are doing the fighting what this conflict is all about.

War correspondents in Korea have reported the bewilderment and confusion of young Americans suddenly dropped into a strange country, and told to stop the advance of a powerful military machine. In one of his early dispatches Homer Bigart of the New York Herald Tribune, described a combat unit that had just come out of the fighting. An officer estimated that one fourth of his men were barely literate, having only the equivalent of a fifth grade education. They were obliged to take a special study course in order to pass simple Army general classification tests.

"I have talked to enlisted men and some younger officers," Bigart wrote, "who had not the slightest inkling of why they were fighting in Korea and what they were fighting for."

JUDGING from these reports, you would hardly know that there is an information and education program in the armed services intended to give the men in the three services an understanding of what it is all about. President Truman even appointed a Committee on Religion and Welfare in the Armed Forces. That committee, which included some prominent names in the field of religion and education, made a survey and wrote a report.

The report went across the desk of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson more than six months ago. It went on through bureaucratic channels and shortly got stalled. As with so many of the other steps intended to prepare this country to meet the challenge of communism, it was still on paper.

"It is essential to the national security," the committee declared, "that our service personnel have knowledge and information, but such knowledge and such information may be meaningless unless they are related to the ideals and principles by which we live and for which we may be forced to fight. Democracy and the democratic way of life remain but philosophies, until they are put into practice by the individual in his own local environment."

In many respects the committee report was too charitable. It praised the half-hearted efforts being made in the direction of education hoping to encourage a greater effort, and for the most part ignored the weaknesses and failures. A member of the committee's staff made a survey in Europe which showed among other things the following:

"EDUCATION of illiterates is a big problem to the commanding officers in this theater (Western Germany). At present over 4000 men with low IQ's (equivalent to less than a fifth grade education) are studying at one of the three basic schools in Frankfurt, Munich, Nuernberg. Many officers to whom I talked complained that the training of these servicemen overseas was time-wasting, money-wasting and personnel-wasting, and does not contribute to the occupation mission.

"I recommended that service personnel, lacking a basic education be trained first in the zone of the interior before being sent overseas. One commanding officer I talked to was about to go on maneuvers minus 17 men he had never seen who were attending the basic school. A high percentage of delinquencies are charged to servicemen who are in the lowest IQ groups, and such misconduct only makes the occupation task more difficult."

One might add that it also makes for an Army low in morale and, therefore, deficient in the will to fight. Hanson Baldwin, military analyst of the New York Times, said recently that this was a serious deficiency of American combat forces in World War II.

It should be pretty clear by this time that what fighting men understand and believe—and how strongly they believe it—is almost as important as the weapons they fight with. Some important recommendations are contained in the report of the President's Committee on Religion and Welfare. That report was sent over to the Secretary of Defense last December. It should now be dusted off, and the information and education program in all three services should be geared to the urgent needs of a democratic society faced with the gravest challenge in its entire history.

Chiefs of Police Support Bill To Ban Slot Machine Shipment

ington Post yesterday he has no objection to committee aproval today. Representative Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.), said he would move for immediate approval.

House Majority Whip J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), a committee member, said he, too, favors the bill with the new definition of gambling. He said some time ago the House would doubtless pass the measure if the committee would report it out.

Senate Committee Meets

Meanwhile, the Senate Crime Investigating Committee held an executive session to sonsider future plans. Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) told reporters the committee hopes soon to hold public hearings in Kansas City and perhaps in St. Louis. He said the committee will go to Chicago sometime before election day. A Chicago Hearst paper had charged the committee was ducking Chicago because of Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) who faces a tough November election fight.

Kefauver indicated that earlier plans for hearings in numerous spots around the country will have to be curtailed because of the continuing session of Congress. Some of the hearings may be held in Washington.

Track Operators Probed By Florida Commission

Jacksonville, July 26 (AP).—Florida's Racing Commission today ordered an investigation of all dog and horse racing track operators in the State.

Leo Edwards of Miami, commission chairman, said the investigation was started at today's session and that the commission has a transcript of testimony at a recent hearing of the U. S. Senate Committee investigating crime.

Testimony given the Senate group included statements that William H. Johnston of Jacksonville, operator of four Florida dog tracks, and an official of Sportsman Park horse track in Chicago, contributed more than $150,000 to Gov. Fuller Warren's 1948 campaign.

State law forbids licensees of tracks from making political contributions.

Big Miami Bookmakers Reported 'Folded'

Miami, July 26 (U.P.).—The multimillion dollar S. & G. bookmaking syndicate was reported today to have gone out of business and a bookie war was predicted for control of the lush Miami Beach gambling domain.

The Miami Herald said no official announcement that S. & G. was quitting had been made but that the syndicate ordered phones removed from its eight offices.

The syndicate, which took in $26,500,000 in the "bad year" of 1948 apparently collapsed as a result of the "combined pressure of half a dozen agencies headed by the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue," the paper said.

The Herald said the end of S. & G. "will have its effects on the Miami Beach municipal bankroll. . . . Fines paid by syndicate agents brought in about $70,000 annually to the City Hall purse." The paper added that five small bookmaking groups now "will battle to take over control" of the local gambling field.

The syndicate controlled more than 200 handbooks in cigar stores, cabana clubs and beachfront hotels.

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee heard testimony in Miami that the syndicate's "take" in 1938 was $26,500,000 but ran as high as $50 million dollars in "good" years.

Guatemala Is Put Under Army Rule In 1-Week Unrest

Guatemala City, July 26 (U.P.).—President Juan Jose Arevalo placed Guatemala under military control today after a week of serious political disturbances.

Arevalo decreed modified martial law in Guatemala City and proclaimed a state of emergency in the rest of the country in an attempt to stem rising unrest.

The government's action was the answer to continued defiance by striking merchants, industrialists, doctors, lawyers and students who ignored official orders to reopen their establishments and resume normal activities.

Six foreign insurance companies, including American firms, were fined $2000 each by government officials as an exemplary measure designed to break the "businessmen's strike" crippling the city.

One on the Aisle—

Grade B Shaw Still Exceptional Fare

By Richard L. Coe

"THE DEVIL'S DISCIPLE," which Maurice Evans is playing at Olney, freed Bernard Shaw from the drudgery of journalism, but it is certainly not one of the great man's better plays.

He conceived it originally, in 1896, as a vehicle for William Terriss, the leading melodramatic star of the day, but Shaw's insistence on interior settings bored the popular star and it was not until Richard Mansfield turned it into an American success that Terriss became interested. Before he could put it on, however, Terriss was stabbed by a stagedoor lunatic and his career was through.

The 3000 pounds Mansfield netted in America 53 years ago, gave Shaw the freedom which led to "Caesar and Cleopatra," "Major Barbara," "Pygmalion" and "Saint Joan."

It is not unnatural that its success in America has been great, for its Revolutionary War incident can strike pride in our righteous breasts; indeed, Johnston Forbes-Robertson wanted Shaw to write for London "a nicer third act—an English victory." Shaw observed: "I've cut him off without a shilling."

The setting is a puritanical, hypocritical New Hampshire village, where piety masks as goodness. The hero, Dick Dudgeon, is a renegade who proclaims himself "The Devil's Disciple," but takes the minister's place when the redcoats come to arrest him. As a man of action, Dick is surprised to find himself a man of essential moral goodness; in a just-before-the-noose-is-snapped finale, the minister is revealed as a man of action. They change places in village duties.

The play betrays its age and its humble ambitions until the entrance of General Burgoyne, the type of vocative, civilized humanist which is the glory of Shavian creations. It allows a third act as funny as anything you'll find this summer, and John Williams' playing of it is properly dry and superbly reasonable. It is a great part, and Shaw's admiration for the man is more completely expressed in his own notes, which you would do well to read.

To Burgoyne falls typically Shavian observations: "Martyrdom . . . the only way in which a man can become famous without ability." . . . "I believe I am Gentlemanly Johnny, sir, at your service. My more intimate friends call me General Burgoyne."

So, with the third act, you are willing to forget the rather painful exposition of the first and the melodramatic substitution of the renegade for the minister in the second.

Dick Dudgeon is hardly a challenge to Star Evans, but he plays him engagingly, if a trifle on the toothpaste side. It must be rather galling to Evans that this characterization has greater public appeal than his far more defined and calculated schoolmaster of last season's "The Browning Version."

Will Tour in Fall

Although only Somer Albert remains from the original City Center revival, the supporting cast is adequate to the purpose. After their engagement here, Evans and company are off to Colorado's Central City for a three-week run before a national tour next fall. Phillip Bourneuf is creditable as the minister and Frances Reid (Mrs. Bourneuf) is happy in the part of the minister's wife, a stern puritan until she comes under the spell of the disbeliever.

The Syrjala settings add much to the quality of the production and the furniture and household goods supplied by Elizabeth Webb further the tone of what is, after all's said, exceptional summer theater fare.

The week's performances are all sold out, but those who get to the box office by 7:30 are likely to be able to snap up the hundred-odd unreserved seats which go on sale nightly for those who are laggards about ticket-buying.

"KISS ME KATE" will be along to spend two weeks at the Watergate opening Monday, August 14 . . . This is the National Company, currently in its sixth Boston week, with Frances McCann, Robert Wright, Marc Platt, Benny Baker and Betty George in the leads . . . Seats next week at Mrs. Stabler's in Brentano's (1322 F st.), with a scale from $1.20 (unreserved) to $3.60 . . . The Cole Porter score, witty and melodic, is the man's finest, and the Water-Kate offering should be great fun . . . You last saw Miss McCann in "The Chocolate Soldier" at the National; her co-star in that one was Keith Andes, who leaves New York's star part of "Kiss Me Kate" this weekend for an RKO film contract; he'll be succeeded in Gotham by Ted Scott, who was honeymooning here a while ago.

LAST NIGHT'S Palace "sneak preview" was "Fancy Pants," with Bob Hope and Lucille Ball . . . Columbia hosted a distinguished invited audience at the Johnston Office for a screening of "711 Ocean Drive," a gambling expose coming to the Warner August 3 . . . Catholic University is in final rehearsals for "The Diary of a Scoundrel," Rodney Ackland's adaptation of Ostrovsky's drama under the direction of Basil Langton; the play opens Friday night, to run through Sunday, August 6.

GEORGE ATKINSON and Victor Kiraly have written a book on the history of the National Theater, going back to cover theatrical activity in the Capital since 1799 . . . They call their volume "A Great Curtain Falls," and the Strand Press, of 225 West 39th st., N. Y., will soon issue it at $5 the copy.

Blue Plate Special:

RACING—If there's the sound of rustling in a particular stall at the Louis Hayyard stud farm in Lexington, Ky., it is doubtless the stirring of Stymie, the people's choice of the race tracks, who has pricked his ears and heard a call back to the races.

Trainer Hirsch Jacobs is seriously considering putting the 9-year-old under silks again, for a special purpose. Jacobs is not the man to trade on another's miseries, but with Ben Jones indicating that Citation will be retired with a lame foot, he wants to give Stymie another shot at the money-winning record which Citation usurped this summer.

Povich

When Citation boosted his purse winnings to $938,000, he surpassed Stymie's total by $20,145 to inherit the title as the winning-est horse of all time. Jacobs reasons that Stymie can go back to the races and wipe out that margin in one try, two at the most.

It would be a popular victory on the day that Stymie did reclaim the title. Stymie has been the poor man's Man O' War, claimed as he was, initially, for only $1500. No more honest a horse ever raced than the reformed plater, and one thing his backers know: When he goes to the post, Jacobs will have him a fit horse.

PHILLIES—Not in years have the major league pennant races produced such a sentimental favorite as the Phillies' Whiz Kids who have been barreling along near the top all summer and showing signs of ability to take it all. They're the youngest team in either league, whose own manager said last spring, "They're a couple of years away."

Even Eddie Sawyer never bargained for such pitching as Robin Roberts, Curt Simmons, Robert Miller and Bubba Church have been giving him. Simmons was a mere four-game winner last season, and apparently incurably wild. He's won 13, lost 5 to date. Young Miller was back at Terre Haute in the Three-Eye League in 1949, and no ball of fire either. He's now won 8, lost 2 for the Phils.

This kid Bubba Church, who held the Cubs to three hits the other day and figured with Roberts in the double shut-out of the Chicago team, was no big winner at Toronto in 1949. He's turned in four wins for the Phils, hasn't been beaten yet. That's what has been happening for Sawyer in a year when his two big winners of the season before, Ken Heintzleman and Dutch Meyer, have been flopping on him.

Right now, the Dodgers and Cardinals wish they could be sure that the Phils are "a couple of years away" from the pennant.

FIGHTS—Ike Williams, the lightweight champion who recently had his ears boxed off in a nontitle fight with George Costner at Philadelphia, is moving down to Washington on August 7 to fight one Charlie Salas for Promoter Gabe Menendez.

It could be a rough evening for Williams, according to the fistic cognoscenti, who measure their proper respect for Salas alongside the definite belief that Williams has slowed up. Salas hasn't licked anybody of particular note, but he has won his last 10 in a row and has title ambitions all his own.

Salas is one of the busiest fighters in the business. He's only 21, and out of Arizona, where they have no boxing commission, and none to stop him from taking five fights in eight days, as he did last year. Nobody has yet knocked him off his feet or beaten him by any kind of a kayo.

If Williams didn't like the decision in his fight against Costner, he still considers himself somewhat lucky to be fighting. En route from California to Philadelphia last summer, he deplaned at Chicago to watch the Ray Robinson-Hernie Docusen fight, forfeiting the rest of his coast-to-coast ticket. The plane he jumped, went down in flames in Pennsylvania.

THE NATS—As of this morning, Sam Mele had connected for six hits in his last seven times at bat, two of them triples and one a two-bagger, and you can almost hear the cheerful whistle of Bucky Harris as he shepherds his Nats through the West.

Mele hitting again, is the item for which Harris had prayed most. When he determined early in the year that Irv Noren was a sure-shot to make good as a major leaguer. Harris visioned Noren and Mele as a potent run-production pair. And then Mele sloughed off in his hitting, troubled as he was by lame back muscles, and Harris was forced to leave him on the bench.

"Our tough luck hasn't been our pitching or anything else except Mele's slump," said Harris before he went into the West. "With Mele swinging that good bat, we're a pretty good team. When he isn't hitting, we're apt to be white meat for any club."

Mele dropped 70 points from what had been a .355 average earlier in the season. He has now climbed back to .303. Harris won't settle for that. "If his back lets him take his good swing, Sam is a cinch to hit .320," says the Nats' manager.

Bob Doerr's Homer Beats Detroit, 1-0, For Parnell

Detroit, July 26 (AP).—Bobby Doerr's second-inning home run coupled with Mel Parnell's five-hit pitching brought the onrushing Boston Red Sox a 1-0 victory over the league-leading Detroit Tigers today.

The defeat shaved the skidding Tigers' lead over the second-place New York Yankees to one-half game. Cleveland, which defeated Philadelphia, is only one and a half games behind Detroit in third place while fourth-place Boston is only four and a half games out of the lead.

Doerr's blast into the leftfield stands, his sixteenth of the year, gave the Sox lefthander a brilliant pitching duel over Detroit's Art Houtteman, who yielded only six hits himself.

Parnell took heat treatments at a hospital only four hours before game time and then went out and got the Red Sockers their sixth straight win.

Detroit Loses 6 Out of 8

It was the sixth loss in eight games for the faltering Tigers.

Parnell pitched his best game of the year in notching his seventh win as against a like number of losses. He had the Tiger hitters swinging fruitlessly at his wide-breaking stuff.

Only one Tiger got as far as third, Jerry Priddy making it on his triple in the fifth. But the Red Sox came up with a double play to get Parnell out of that difficulty.

4th Shutout for Sox

It was Boston's fourth shutout of the season and the first for Parnell. The whitewashing was the third the Tigers have absorbed with Houtteman's six-hitter going for naught as he suffered his ninth loss as against 11 wins.

Tebbets Hurts Shoulder, Bosox Recall Rosar

Detroit, July 26 (AP).—Catcher Birdie Tebbetts of the Boston Red Sox was out of the lineup with a bruised right shoulder today after taking a tumble at first base in the fourth inning of last night's game with the Detroit Tigers.

Dr. Frank Lindeman at Henry Ford Hospital said X-rays showed there was no fracture and no separation of the shoulder.

But Birdie carried his right arm in a sling today and probably will be out of action from four days to a week, Dr. Lindeman said.

The Red Sox called up Catcher Buddy Rosar from their Louisville farm club in the American Association.

Cubs Blow 4-0 Lead

Phillies Walk in, 6-4; Dubiel Blows Up in 6th

Philadelphia, July 26 (AP).—Walt Dubiel blew up in the sixth inning tonight, walking six men and allowing two hits, as the Philadelphia Phillies scored all of their runs for a 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The victory increased the Phils' National League lead to one and one-half games.

Going into the sixth inning holding a 4-0 lead, Dubiel lost all sight of the plate.

Eddie Waitkus singled and Richie Ashburn popped out. Dick Sisler walked and Del Ennis doubled home the first run. Then in quick order, Dubiel handed out passes to Willie Jones, Gran Hamner, Stan Lopata, Mike Goliat and Bill Nicholson to come within one of tying the National League record for consecutive walks in one inning. The sixth run came on an infield out by Waitkus, up for a second time.

The six walks in one inning also came within one of matching a league mark.

The cubs broke a string of 27 consecutive scoreless frames in the first inning when Carmen Mauro doubled and scored on Hank Sauer's single. Andy Pafko's 18th homer added another in the second.

Russ Meyer, Phillies' starting pitcher, was ejected from the game in the fifth for protesting a called balk strike. Milo Candini received credit for the victory, his first of the year, although Jim Konstanty hurled the last three innings.

Bums Win, 7-5, Musial Hits In 30th Game

Brooklyn, July 26 (AP).—Stan Musial extended his consecutive hitting streak through 30 straight games today but was forced to yield hitting honors to Jim Russell who spearheaded the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 7-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Russell, who played only because the Cards started Harry Brecheen, a lefthander, banked two home runs, one with a mate on base, to account for the winning runs.

The former Pittsburgh and Boston flychaser hit his first homer in the first inning while batting right-handed against Brecheen. A switch hitter, Russell hammered his second homer and ninth of the season against righthander Red Munger in the fifth while batting lefthanded.

Don Newcombe, who hasn't been beaten by St. Louis this year, was the victor although he needed help from Ralph Branca in the ninth. Branca replaced the righthander after Marty Marion drew a pass to open the inning. Ralph shut the door in the Card's faces by fanning the first two men and retiring the other on a pop fly. It was Don's ninth win of the season, his fourth over St. Louis.

Giants Make It 7 in Row, 3-2

New York, July 26 (AP).—The Nek York Giants registered their seventh straight victory today when Sal Maglie not only pitched but batted them to a 3-2 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

With the score tied at 2-2 in the seventh inning, Maglie singled to center off Howie Fox to score Alvin Dark from second base with the deciding run.

Maglie had a chance to break the tie two innings earlier following his lead-off triple. However, he left third base before Whitey Lockman's fly was caught by Leftfielder Joe Adcock and was ruled out.

Dark, who had a perfect day at the plate with three hits and a walk in four times at bat, drove in the first two Giant runs in the second inning. Three singles and a walk by the Reds in the fifth tied the score.

Maglie allowed six hits for his seventh victory. The defeat was No. 7 for Fox.

Ball Gives Tired Redskins Day of Rest

Lo Angeles, July 26. (AP)—Tired and stiff from yesterday's all-out scrimmage, the Washington Redskins enjoyed a respite today with promises that things will pick up again tomorrow.

Coach Herman Ball let the players sleep until 8 a. m. today, an hour later than usual, and then held a meeting at 10 a. m. to discuss yesterday's scrimmage.

Fullback Rob Goode, whose injury yesterday forced Ball to move Ed Quirk from center back to fullback, was found to be suffering from a sprained ankle.

With Fullback Pete Stout still sidelined with a leg injury, Quirk will return to his old spot, at least until Goode is declared ready.

Stockman Wins Solons' Golf With 36

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Memo to rainmakers: a sure-fire recipe to create a downpour in the Nation's Capital—schedule a golf match with big "names" as competitors.

The weatherman dealt the Congressional-Professional a foul blow just as he did the National Celebrities tournament last month, but it failed to dampen the spirits of half a hundred Congressmen and local pro at East Potomac public golf course.

Representative Lowell Stockman, dark horse from Oregon, came up with a brilliant—for him—game of golf to win both low net and low gross in the Congressional Sweepstakes with a two-over-par 36 for the nine holes.

Eligible for either the Kronheim Cup or the Secretary of the Interior trophy, Stockman chose the former. Representative Wilson, Indiana Republican, shot a 37 and was awarded the Interior trophy.

Stockman's victory was all the more remarkable because he tied his pro, Walt Bogley of Prince Georges.

In the Congressional-Professional division of the tournament, Representative Wilson teamed up with Pro Al Houghton of Prince Georges to win with a 63.

Houghton finished in a four-way tie for first place with 33s in the Pro Sweepstakes with Al Jamison, Quantico Officer's Club, Ward Burgess, Chevy Chase, and Al Tredor, East Potomac.

After taking a double bogey six on the first hole, a par-four, 285-yarder, Stockman really got hot. The twice-a-month golfer made a beautiful tee shot to within 10 feet of the pin on the 142-yard, par-three, second.

He holed out the putt perfectly

Weekes, Columbia All-America Dies

New York, July 26 (AP).—Harold Hathaway Weekes, an all America football player with Columbia in 1901, died yesterday after a long illness.

Weekes had been a stock broker with offices here.

He made Walter Camp's All America team as a left halfback, and also was included on Camp's all-time all-player list in 1910.

Weekes, as a freshman, led Columbia to victory over Yale, 5-0, in 1899. It was the first Columbia triumph over Yale in 26 years.

Colts Drop Bill Walsh

Westminister, Md., July 26 (AP).—Bill Walsh, former University of Virginia center, was cut off the squad today by the Baltimore Colts of the National Football league. Walsh was making his first bid for a professional football team.

DiMaggio's 2-Run Homer Paces Yanks' 6-3 Victory

St. Louis, July 26 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio slammed a two-run homer in the sixth inning to help the New York Yankees pull within a half-game of the league-leading Detroit Tigers with their 6-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns tonight.

Rookie Ed Ford and former Brownie Tom Ferrick shared mound work for the New Yorkers, with Ford getting credit for the triumph.

Ford was working for a shutout until the sixth, when with two out Roy Sievers beat out a hit. He took third on George Stirnweiss' drive to left field and scored as Sherman Lollar beat out a hit to Jerry Coleman.

Ferrick the ntook over, although the Yankees held a three-run lead. Wood doubled, scoring Stirnweiss, but Lollar was out trying to reach the plate.

The Yanks took the lead at the start of the game when Gene Woodling tripled and scored as Owne Friend threw the ball into the stands on the relay from the outfield. Phil Rizzuto esingled, took third on Hank Bauer's esingle, and then scored when Johnny Mize grounded out.

Rain Halts Nats-Chisox, Play 2 Today

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Chicago, July 26—Rain today did what the White Sox haven't had much success in doing all season—stop the Nats. The clubs will make up the postponement tomorrow with a daylight doubleheader.

Sid Hudson, shooting for his tenth victory, and Chico Marrero, trying for his sixth, will start for Bucky Harris' Nats. They'll be opposed by Billy Pierce, the fast-balling Chisox lefthander with a 7-9 record, and the veteran Randy Gumpert, a righthander, who has 3-5. Pierce beat the Yanks with a one-hitter earlier this year.

Sandy Consuegra, slight Cuban fastballer, was on the mound for Washington against Ken Holcombe when the sudden cloudburst brought an end to today's game in the third inning. It was a 0-0 tie with the Sox at bat when the rains came, and after an hour and eight-

Tribe Thumps Macks, 6 to 2

Cleveland, July 26—(AP).—Cleveland's Indians climbed to within a game and a half of the first-place Detroit Tigers tonight by drubbing the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 2.

It was Cleveland's ninth straight win over Philadelphia. The visitors knocked Mike Garcia out of the box in the third inning, when they tied the score at two-all. Sam Zoldak was the winning pitcher and Dick Fowler the loser.

Zoldak held Philadelphia to two hits over the rest of the route, to mark up his third relief victory in seven days. He now has pitched 20 consecutive scoreless innings in the fireman's role.

Fowler gave up 13 hits and eight bases on balls, but the A's made four double plays to hold down the scoring.

Manager Lou Boudreau led the Cleveland batting attack with three hits, two of them bunts.

Fight Managers, IBC Map Plans for 72 Big Indoor Shows

As Havana Slumps

Rivals Yell 'Bueno' to Nats 'Raids'

By Barney Waters
Special to The Washington Post

Havana, July 25.—Clark Griffith doesn't know it, but he may be preserving the future of the Class B Florida International League—of which Havana, his Latin talent plant, is a member.

Since the league was organized in 1945, the Cubans have won the pennant easily and only once, in a Shaughnessy playoff in 1946, have they been defeated.

So this year, clubowners—excepting Tom Spicola of second-place Tampa—are banding to oust the Havana team from the circuit because of their overwhelming superiority.

But while other club officials rant and rave over the lack of competition the Havana club is confronting, Clark Griffith is taking care of that problem in good form.

The Washington Nats now have on their staff Conrado Marrero and Sandalio Consuegra, 20-game winners south of the border and Julio Jiqui Marerco is expected to join the Nats shortly.

The loss of Marrero and Consuegra was not too noticeable, due to the abundance of reserve strength.

But when Rogelio Martinez was injured June 21, later sent to the Nats, and then returned because of the leg injury, things started to happen on the little island.

Martinez was sent back slightly used and Moreno was readied as his replacement, making four starting pitchers rendered useless to Rodriguez.

Here's what has happened since Martinez' injury and the corresponding developments:

The Cubans have won only 15 out of 30 games, a poor for Havana, .500 average.

They lost five in a row recently. Their longest losing streak before then had been two straight, and that only on a couple of occasions.

A 12-game lead over Tampa has been whittled to four with third-place Miamia only three more games off.

That may not sound like too close a race, but to fans who have seen the Cubans wind up 10 to 20 games ahead every year, it's alarming.

Consequently, attendance has been increasing and even the Cuban followers have been coming out in bigger numbers.

The league moguls will meet this winter and if the Cubans are dethroned before then, there may be some different ideas.

So if Florida baseball fans see any Class B games next year, they can thank Clark Griffith of Washington.

Pep-Saddler Bout Still In Talk Stage

By Murray Rose

New York, July 26 (AP).—Expressing confidence in the future of boxing, the Internatinal Boxing club today said it plans to run from 70 to 72 indoor shows in the coming season, the "most ambitious big-time program" in the history of the sport.

This was disclosed by Jim Norris, president of the IBC, as he came to an agreement, with the New York Boxing Managers Guild for the division of television money for Wednesday night cards.

The IBC and managers signed a contract several weeks ago on the split of TV receipts for Friday night programs.

Today the two groups signed a contract which will give each main event fighter $1,000 as his share of the television money for Wednesday nights.

These shows will be staged in New York's St. Nicholas Arena, Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis. There will be 35 Wednesday shows with about 10 each in New York, Chicago and Detroit and five in St. Louis.

Under the TV agreement for the 35 Friday New York cards in Madison Square Garden and the St. Nicholas Arena, each of the two main eventers will get $2250 of the video income.

All told the IBC and Garden combination will collect around $780,000 for TV and radio. Of this the fighters will net around $227,500 for their cut of the air money alone.

Charley Johnston, president of the Manager Guild, closed the agreement for his side. But he didn't have any success in closing for a title fight between featherweight Champion Willie Pep and ex-champ Sandy Saddler. Johnston manages Saddler.

That fight was still up in the air as Lou Viscusi, manager of Pep, conferred with his [illegible] Hartford and then New York for another confab with IBC officials.

The talking has been going on for days and the principals still are a good bit apart.

Competition Easier Now, Louis Admits

Detroit, July 26 (U.P.)—Joe Louis is older, slower and fatter than when he gave up his heavyweight crown two years ago, but he isn't worried a bit over his chances of winning it back.

"I've got one big advantage other champs didn't have when they tried comebacks—the competition is lots easier now," the Brown Bomber said in disclosing plans to start training at French Licks, Ind., for a proposed September fight with Champion Ezzard Charles.

In New York, Harry Markson, direction of the International Boxing Club, said he was "very hopeful" that the bout would be held at either the Polo Grounds or Yankee Stadium in September.

California Girl Swims Channel Halfway in Trial

Calais, France, July 26 (AP).—Florence Chadwick of San Diego, Calif., took one of her usual practice swims today in preparation for her attempt to swim the English Channel.

Miss Chadwick said that she swam for five hours and estimated that she had made more than half the distance to England. She said, however, that she knew it was the easier half she had made in that time. Waning strength and adverse currents usually slow the swimmers in the final stages.

Told of reports that the crossing this morning was a formal attempt she said "that's a lot of baloney."

Senator Fibs About Game, Rival Says

AFTER Senator George Malone of Nevada holed out a 14-foot-putt on the third hole at East Potomac golf course yesterday in the Congressional-Professional tournament, Senator Homer Ferguson, Michigan lawmaker who won fame as a Senate investigator, fixed a stern eye upon him.

"George, you've been lying about your handicap again," he complained.

The Congressmen were given handicaps according to what they said they shot—using the honor system.

Yesterday's downpour brought mixed emotions from the lawmakers who played in the drizzle.

"I came out here to play golf and here I am swimming," complained Representative Abraham J. Multer of New York.

"There's more rain here today than we have in a whole year in Nevada," agreed Senator George Malone. "Oh well, we just missed having a good day by 24 hours."

SENATOR FERGUSON explained his philosophy about golf—"If you shoot in the 90s you've neglected your golf, if you shoot in the 80s, you've neglected your business, and if you shoot in the 70s, you don't have any business," he said. "I can say that because I'm a terrible golfer," he smiled.

The Senator then refuted his statement by holing out a 20-foot put on the second, to become the only member of his foursome, including two pros, to get a par. The others took bogeys.

Ferguson's putting was one of the sensations of the tourney—besides his 20 footer on the second, he holed out a 15 footer on the fifth, and a 10 footer on the fourth.

With the greens in slushy condition, the Senator's feat was remarkable.

Representative L. Gary Clemente, of New York, was an unhappy man. His best drive of the day, an enormous 300 yarder, far overshot the fifth green and rolled into the nearby Potomac.

Representative Clemente lost six golf balls on the course, but ended up with a net gain of six when he got a dozen balls as a prize for winning sixth low net.

ON THE 142-yard second hole, Senator Malone wanted to use a eight iron. "Use a seven," advised his pro playing partner, "you'll need the extra power."

Malone overshot the hole by ten yards. "I'll keep quiet from here on in," promised the chagrined pro.

Representative Michael Feighan of Ohio won second low net playing with a broken finger on his left hand. The digit was heavily taped and bandaged.

Representative Bill Widnall of New Jersey, playing his first round of golf in ten years, was formerly a member of the Brown University golf team.

"The rain reminds me of a match we played with Williams," he said. "I lost six balls in the mud in the center of the fairway that day."

On the next shot Widnall putting from 12 feet off the green, hit the flag which no one had removed. His ball bounced six feet away from the pin. Otherwise he would have made the shot on the fourth hole.

"Oh well, that's life," sighed the Congressman.

DAVE HELLER

Billy Wolfe 2 Back; Match Play Today

Dennis Bolster registered a two-over par 72 to win the medal in the qualifying round of the Junior Chamber of Commerce sectional golf tournament yesterday at Georgetown Prep.

Yesterday's 16 qualifiers in the championship flight begin match play today and continue through tomorrow. The four semi-finalists will go to Ames, Iowa, for the National Junior Chamber of Commerce tournament August 13-19.

Bolster had only two bad holes, playing par golf on the rest. He three-putted the third hole on his first time around the nine-hole course and his approach shot to the first green on his second time around went into a trap.

Bill Wolfe shot 37-37—74 to take second place among the qualifers. Bill birdied the seventh and eighth holes his second time around but three-putted the eighteenth for a bogey five.

Hank Ford, Glenn Mitchell, Perky Cullinane and John Eisinger were two strokes behind Wolfe with 76's.

Stockman's 36 Wins Title in the slushy, waterlogged green for a birdie deuce. "Let's quit now," I'm through," he quipped.

Five straight par fours proved him wrong. He bogied the par three eighth, missing his putt for a par by an eyelash, and then parred the ninth with another four. His eight handicap made his net score a six-under-par 28.

Wilson, in the same foursome with Stockman, narrowly missed tieing the winner's score. He had a 37. Three straight bogies on three, four, and five, in the downpour, made the difference.

Three prizes were slated to be given for the pro sweepstakes but the prize committee merely divided the money among the four top pros without a playoff.

The Congressmen received golf clubs, golf balls and ties for their prizes. Mrs. Florence Bratton, secretary to Vice President Alben Barkley, was given a baseball autographed by Commissioner A. B. "Happy" Chandler in recognition of her work as a member of the tournament committee.

Larry Dooley was master of ceremonies. Milton S. Kronheim awarded the prizes.

Griffs Play Chisox Today

minute delay, the umps called it off.

It was the second time this season that the rains had stopped a Consuegra-pitched game against the White Sox. Only last time, last month in Griffith Stadium, the Nats managed to take a 6-0 lead before the downpour and the victory went into the books.

As a reward for his three straight hits as a pinch-hitter, and his two triples and single last night, Harris has definitely restored Sam Mele to the left-field position.

Before the showers came on today, the White Sox had touched Consuegra for one hit, a bunt by Dave Philley in the first inning. Irv Noren clubbed a double for Washington in the first, and Al Evans poked a single in the third, but nobody got to third base.

Consuegra has accounted for two of Washington's 11 victories over Chicago in 15 games.

In a terrible slump, the Sox have won only 10 of their last 27 games, and the two biggest reasons are the woeful batting slumps of their two muscle men, Gus Zernial and Eddie Robinson.

Youth at Crossroads

Reform Schools No Sure Cure for Youthful Crime

(Fifth in a Series)

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

THE heads of Washington's "reform schools" admit that they do not know how much good the institutions do juvenile delinquents.

They keep no figures on "recidivism"—backsliding. The job, they say, would be overwhelmingly complex. And without the statistical tabulation, there can be little more than guesswork.

A Department of Justice spokesman said that there were partial figures indicating that 72 percent of juvenile third offenders graduate into crime. A few years ago, a survey was made showing that about three out of every four graduates of reformatories became adult criminals.

Harold E. Hegstrom, superintendent of the National Training School for Boys, said that he "believes" that his institution has a better record, and that not more than half of the boys who leave there become prison inmates. But, he cannot prove it by figures.

The city has the National Training School for Boys, the National Training School for Girls, and the Industrial Home Schools. There is also the District Training School for Feebleminded Children.

What good do they do?

ACCORDING to the personnel handbook of the Department of Corrections, "Even at their best, however, correctional institutions cannot be considered as favorable environments in which to rehabilitate those people who populate them."

The National Training School, administered by the Federal Bureau of Prisons, has an elaborate program with emphasis placed on teaching the boy how to make a living. The other institutions, all controlled by the Board of Public Welfare, are more informal and have as their main object keeping the child identified with his community life, while furthering his education and training.

The proponents of the National Training School for Girls and the Industrial Home Schools say that with the limited facilities available, they do a good job. They send the most needful cases for psychiatric treatment. They are using modern techniques.

It is to the National Training School for Boys that the older, the more experienced child delinquents go. The inmates call it "The Hill."

The Justice Department considers it the finest institution of its kind in the country.

Its critics say that such a description means little. Such institutions, they say, teach boys to "conform," but do not "reform" them. By associating with the "bad boys" there, the youthful offender learns easily the tricks of the criminal and how to "seduce" authority rather than to "respect" it, they say.

REGARDLESS, Hill officials say they use the most advanced techniques, and sometimes under difficult circumstances. They must deal with the "defective" delinquent whose mental capacity is too small for treatment. They must also prevent escape attempts.

"We grasp at every straw," says Superintendent Hegstrom, "that can possibly avail our inmates."

For example, boys with deformities are given plastic surgery; there are psychotherapists and psychologists, but no psychiatrist.

Every attempt is made to get the boys interested in recreation and team activities. They live—except in the most antisocial cases—in cottages.

There are church facilities, athletic facilities available, television, radio, musical instruments; but the emphasis remains on occupational training and raising the level of maturity of the boys.

The boys are taught shoemaking, cooking, baking, farming and other occupations, notably machine card classification.

The "group therapy" technique was pioneered there. It is a method where the boys, under supervision, thrash out the difficulties within themselves. Some people refer to them as glorified "bull sessions," but early results of the technique are promising, despite initial resistance to the method from many inmates. It works this way:

ONE boy in a group complained that his downfall was caused by his "drunken old lady." Finally, the other boys convinced him that perhaps he had used this as an excuse.

Another boy complains of the "chow." The therapist is likely to point out that he himself goes home every night to steak because he does not violate the law.

Most promising of all, according to Hegstrom, is the Sponsor Program. Here, citizens in the community agree to take an inmate in tow, advise him and aid him in his future life. It is a brave task, because sponsors take into their homes youngsters who were guilty of acts which indicate the youths might be developing—if not stopped—into perverts, thugs and murderers.

The change in attitude of many sponsored boys is striking, Hegstrom says. The boy realizes for the first time that someone who is neither a paid reformer or an amateur "do-gooder" is taking an interest in him.

Through the sponsors, boys often have obtained jobs after their release. Sponsors attempt to help the home situation. One boy was admitted into a fashionable prep school, where he failed. Another entered a university, where he now is a promising student.

VERY few boys are released solely on the representation of the sponsor, other factors being always considered. There have been notable successes. Yet there are a few failures which, Hegstrom says, cannot be traced to the sponsor.

"We want one sponsor for each boy, if we can get one. It is a wonderful thing that the sponsors do."

The average term of the boys at the school is less than two years, and many critics think this is a disadvantage. It is difficult, they say, to re-orient a youth in that time after 16 years of maladjustment before entering the school.

Other boys must stay there until they reach their majority. Paroles are through a Parole Board, headed by James E. Bennett, Director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

When the boy leaves the school, attempts are made to put him in a "favorable culture," as the psychologists put it.

Yet, why do so many boys leave reform school and head for the penitentiary?

"Only the very naive or very optimistic believe our institutions reform many people," says Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg.

Rep. Smith Refuses To Disqualify Self in Miller Milk Hearings

Attorney for Dairy Questioned His Right To Serve Because He Owned Farms

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

A Washington dairy spokesman yesterday questioned the right of Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) to continue serving on the House subcommittee considering the Miller milk bill because of Smith's personal interest in the issue.

The question was raised at a final committee hearing on the bill that would open up the Washington milk market to outside milk by John A. Hillyard, attorney for the independent Wakefield Dairy. Wakefield wants importation permitted so it won't be forced to buy from the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association which controls about 85 percent of the District's supply.

Hillyard quoted Rule 8 of the House which states that each member present shall vote on all questions "unless he has a direct personal or pecuniary interest. . . ." Since Smith owns several northern Virginia farms supplying the Washington area, Hillyard said he didn't know whether the Congressman should continue on the subcommittee.

Says Tenants Run Farms

Smith admitted owning farms, but said each was operated by a tenant.

Said Smith: "Whatever personal interest I have is so small it could not influence my vote . . . but I am influenced by the fact that the dairy industry is the largest in my Congressional district.

"I want to see the farmer get a fair deal," Smith continued," and I am not going to be swerved by somebody from the Embassy (Dairy) outfit or its sidekick, the Wakefield Dairy."

Embassy is another independent Washington dairy which wants to enlarge the source of supply.

Smith told a reporter he would not disqualify himself from voting.

Dr. Seckinger Is Heard

The subcommittee yesterday also heard District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger state that by 1960 the Washington area milk supply must be increased nearly 20 million gallons annually from the present 58 million gallons.

A witness for the milk producers association, Chester F. Bletch, said his group would not object to expanding the milkshed so long as each farm shipping here continued to be inspected by District health officials. The Miller bill would do away with this present restriction, by accepting United States Public Health Service standards.

The committee announced that persons wishing to file statements on the bill may do so until Monday.

D. C. Hearings Ended

Meanwhile, at the District Building, District Commissioners also concluded their hearings on proposed changes in District milk regulations. Most speakers represented citizens groups. And, as at previous hearings, discussion centered around the question of the steam versus chemical methods of sterilizing dairy farm equipment.

Attorneys Thomas B. Scott and Garland E. Taylor, speaking for 14 citizens associations, advocated use of chemicals. However, they called the proposed regulations "inadequate" and urged a complete overhaul of the District Milk Act and regulations.

Argument of opponents of sterilization was: Since Washington now has the best milk in the country, why take a chance on something that may lower the quality?

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, 2345 Ashmead pl., nw., widow of the author of the 1906 Pure Food Act, said use of chemicals would mean a "stepping down . . . to a second grade milk."

Seven speakers opposed a change to chemical sterilization. Four favored it. The Federation of Citizens Associations took no stand.

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

EXPERT ADVICE—Nurses from practically every hospital in the Washington Metropolitan area yesterday attended a one-day institute on nursing care of poliomyelitis at Children's Hospital. The institute was sponsored by the Graduate Nurses' Association, in cooperation with the D. C. Chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, the D. C. Red Cross, the D. C. Health Department and the Joint Orthopedic Advisory Service. Miss Teresa Fallon, nursing consultant, shows the proper handling of a patient in a respirator with Miss Lillian M. Adams, director of nursing for the D. C. Chapter of the Red Cross in the role of the patient. The day long session was attended by 72 nurses

Va. Town Has Nation's Worst Polio Outbreak

Wytheville, Va., July 26 (AP).—Like a sudden grim fog, polio has struck this Southwest Virginia community with terrifying severity.

Fifty-nine cases—one percent of the town's 5500 population—is the count to date. Eleven have died in the town and surrounding county of Wythe (population 23,000) since July 1. The county has had 16 cases.

Three out of four cases in Wytheville have been children under 10 years.

It is Virginia's worst outbreak in history and by far the most concentrated.

[The United Press quoted Basil O'Connor, president of the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation, as saying the outbreak is the most serious in the history of the foundation.]

For the State as a whole, there have been 166 cases this year, with eight new ones today. There have been 14 deaths in the State.

"I didn't see a child on the streets while I was there," Virginia's commissioner of health, Dr. L. J. Roper, said in Richmond today after a visit here. He described Wytheville as a town of "tension."

While here he conferred with a consultant of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Dr. Alexander Steigman. Virus specimens have been taken taken to the University of Louisville for research purposes.

D. C. Area Polio Tally Rises to 58

This year's poliomyelitis total for the Washington area rose to 58 cases yesterday as four more were reported by area health officers.

Two of the cases were in Fairfax County, one in Montgomery County, and one in the District. This brought the D. C. total to 30 for the year compared with 12 at this time in 1949.

The Fairfax Health Department said both new cases— a girl, 3, and a boy, 6,—were from Fort Belvoir, both were stricken July 24, and both admitted to Walter Reed Hospital. It was the county's eighth case this year.

The Montgomery County polio sufferer was a 6-year-old boy from the 500 block of Margaret dr., Silver Spring. The fifth county case to date, he was admitted to Childrens Hospital.

The District case, a 10-year-old girl from the 1700 block of T st. nw., was admitted to Childrens on July 24.

Price Doubled, Sales Trebled

You can't beat people when it comes to acting goofy.

Take it from Max Rosenthal, Southeast grocer.

He took some scare-buyers to the cleaners, but good, yesterday.

Tuesday, Rosenthal was selling sugar in his Thrifty Modern Market, 914 8th st., se., 5 pounds, 49 cents, and he moved about 300 pounds.

Yesterday, Rosenthal went down in history as probably the only merchant who ever doubled his prices and tripled his volume in 24 hours.

He piled 5-pound sugar sacks in front of his store. He put out a big sign, blazoning "Special: Sugar, 98 cents for 5 pounds." And then he started really to sell sugar, 1000 pounds of it.

"How do you figure it?" Rosenthal was asked.

Court Clears Andrews Flier

An Andrews Air Force Base flier yesterday was cleared by a special court martial of violating flying regulations last April at Shaw Air Base, S. C.

The airman, Capt. Douglas R. Plowden, was accused of flying too low over the South Carolina air base and flying in a reckless manner over vehicular traffic in Sumter, S. C.

The four-man court deliberated only 10 minutes after hearing testimony for nearly two full days.

Capt. Plowden, who is 30, holds the Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross and Purple Heart for World War II service.

D. C. Bills Passed by Senate, Including 5-Day Police Week

In rapid-fire order, the Senate yesterday passed a long list of District bills, including a measure to provide a five-day week for the Metropolitan Police.

Included in the bill were members of the United States Park Police force and the White House police force.

The measure now goes back to the House for action on amendments. One amendment is to make the shorter work week effective when necessary funds have been appropriated and become available.

The House is expected to give speedy assent to Senate changes. The cost of the five-day week for the first year of its operation has been estimated at more than $900,000. A supplemental appropriation will be filed with the House Appropriations Committee when the measure becomes law.

Also passed was an act to provide for a mutual-aid plan for fire protection by and for the District and certain adjacent communities

The Senate also accepted a bill to amend and clarify the District of Columbia Teachers Leave Act of 1949.

The bill raises from 60 to 75 days the amount of sick leave that may be accumulated, and broadens the definition of teachers' personal or family emergencies.

The measure now goes to the House for action.

The Senate also passed bills requiring private employers here to pay the wages of their workers at least twice a month; to register and regulate professional engineers; to amend the law as to the signature of physicians authorizing the transportation of bodies.

Also to amend the law regarding the issuance of dealers' identification tags; and to amend the District code regarding trespass. (This change would make it illegal to trespass on public buildings and grounds, as well as on private property. It is aimed at restricting the use of parking lots for public buildings.)

These measures all go to the House for action.

A House-passed bill providing for Government acquisition of property on Jackson pl. nw., near the White House and Blair House, to prevent a commercial development there was adopted by the Senate and sent to the White House.

Because of objections, the following bills were held over for later consideration: Regulation of the practice of optometry here; establishment of a maximum wage for regulation of professional architects; authorizing the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to build a new home for the agency in the District.

George Biddle, Peets Get Fine Arts Positions

George Biddle, well-known American painter and brother of former Attorney General Francis Biddle, yesterday was named to the Commission of Fine Arts by President Truman.

Also named to the Commission was Elbert Peets, 1613 Riggs pl. nw., landscape architect. Peets is now consultant to the Puerto Rican Housing Authority.

Biddle's extensive work includes murals in the Justice Department building. He is author of "Artist at War," the story of his experience during eight months with Allied troops in Italy and Africa. Biddle has been credited with being the father of the Federal Arts program which began in 1933.

Peets is coauthor of "Civic Art," a standard work on city planning. During the war, he was in charge of site planning for the United States Housing Authority and designed the town of Greendale, Wis., one of tme four "Green" towns established by the Resettlement Administration. He designed several other war housing projects.

A married couple and a man from Arlington were fined $100 each and sentenced to 60 days in jail on lottery charges yesterday by Arlington County Court Judge Harry Thomas.

Baltimore Parkway Approved by Senate, Bill to White House

Tydings Warns Of Atomic Attack In Urging Action To Provide Road

Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) of the Armed Services Committee yesterday warned the Senate that an atomic attack on Washington "by a major power" cannot be considered "an improbability."

It is no more in the class of an improbability than the attack upon Korea was only a few weeks ago, Tydings said.

His warning was delivered during a discussion of a House-passed measure to complete the District of Columbia end of the Baltimore-Washington pky. The measure was passed by voice vote and sent to the White House.

Would Serve Airport

Tydings told his colleagues that the new parkway would serve the giant Friendship Airport between Baltimore and Washington, which, he said, all military authorities agreed would be the most important airport in this country for the defense of the Nation's Capital.

The Maryland Democrat said it was no military secret that in the event of a war between the United States and a major power Friendship airport would be taken over by the Army.

It would become, he declared, the main interceptor field to protect Washington, and had been built with that in mind.

The field, Tydings explained, is three or four times as large as New York's LaGuardia airport, and has a runway two miles long and two or three hundred feet wide.

It was designed, he told the Senate, to accommodate any plane now in existence, in the process of construction, or even on this Nation's military drawing boards.

Military Highway

He said the field is without any obstructions and is built on a plateau. The parkway would be a military highway of great importance in the event of a major war, Tydings added.

Several times Tydings urged his colleagues to take seriously his warning of the possibility of attack by a major power on the Capital.

He referred to the bills introduced to move the Capital from Washington in the event of a major war, and without amplifying, said there were "other plans" under contemplation.

Senator John McClellan (D., Ark.), of the Committee on Public Works, explained that the bill would provide 13 million dollars in Federal funds to complete the 19 miles of parkway to the Maryland line. He said Baltimore has already put in a bond issue to spend $14,685,000 on its share of the road.

After N. Y. Check

No Fischbach Charges, Says Crime Group

The House District Crime Subcommittee so far has found "no specific charges" against its chief counsel, Hyman I. Fischbach, Chairman James G. Davis (D., Ga.) announced last night.

Davis disclosed after a brief meeting of his crime group yesterday that Representative Olin Teague (D., Tex.), a subcommittee member, and J. Harry Welch of the District Bar Association, made a secret trip to New York Monday to check into Fischbach's background. The counsel is a New York lawyer.

"No Specific Charges"

Davis said his subcommittee received reports from Teague and Welch, and "no specific charges were made as a result of the out-of-town inquiry.

"The subcommittee does have one or two questions they still want to ask Fischbach," Davis reported, adding that the counsel would be in Washington today for another meeting with his congressional employers.

The checkup on Fischbach was ordered last week by the House Administration Committee when it approved an appropriation of $20,000 more for the crime group, to continue its investigation of local crime and law enforcement.

New York Leads Given

It was learned a member of the Administration Committee, who had raised objections to Fichbach, gave Davis "leads" for the New York check.

That Fischbach appears to be on solid ground with the crime subcommittee was indicated by Representative Thomas Stanley (D., Va.) who told reporters as he left the meeting:

"I am satisfied with what I heard in there."

Stanley is chairman of the Accounts Subcommittee of the Administration group which proposed the check on Fischbach.

Davis said he hoped his subcommittee would announce a decision on Fischbach after today's scheduled meeting.

Two Traffic Deaths Put D. C. Toll at 38

MRS. ELAINE SHERRY
. . . loses life in crash

District Traffic Toll:
1950 deaths to date.....38
1949 deaths to date.....37
Total 1949 death toll.....71

An 18-year-old housewife and a 21-year-old Library of Congress employe died yesterday as the result of two separate traffic accidents.

Mrs. Elaine Sherry, 18, of 503 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, Md., died in Emergency Hospital shortly after a streetcar-auto collision. Her husband, Douglas, 19, is at the hospital in critical condition with a fractured skull and right leg. It was the tragic finale to an evening's moonlight cruise.

The second District traffic death was Richard W. Tillman, 21, 3204 15th st. ne. He died at Casuality Hospital in the afternoon of a fractured skull received in an auto accident Monday at 12th and B sts. se.

Tillman was a passenger in a car driven by William H. Thompson, jr., 19, 1245 Kearney st. ne., which collided with a dump truck operated by Cal Brice, 22, 1205 28th st. nw. Thompson is in serious condition at Casualty Hospital with internal injuries.

Brice, who was uninjured, was charged with colliding and will appear at a coroner's inquest later.

Sherry, an employe of the F. W. Woolworth store in Hyattsville, was pinned in the car for almost a half hour before Rescue Squad No. 1 was able to remove him from the back seat.

Police said the car containing six persons was driven by Fred B. Johnson, 42, 4413 Chestnut st., Bethesda, and the collision occurred when he attempted a left turn into Constitution from 7th st. in the path of the southbound 7th st. trolley. Johnson is in critical condition at Emergency with a crushed chest and fractured skull.

Johnson's wife, Mattie, 35, is in critical condition at the hospital with a fractured collarbone, ribs, pelvis, ankle and internal injuries.

Two other injured passengers were Miss Virginia Campbell, 19, 4505 Highland ave., Bethesda, in serious condition with a fractured skull, and John T. Stang, 19, Route 1, Rockville, who suffered a fractured right shoulder and right leg.

Ambulance Speeder Gets Thirty Days

Aaron Lewis, jr., 37, yesterday was sentenced to 30 days in jail for reckless driving here while piloting a Bolling Air Base ambulance at speeds of up to 75 miles an hour.

The chase, according to police in the Municipal Court hearing, went on for five miles of zigzagging and skidding past stop signs and red lights Tuesday evening. It began at Florida and New York aves. and ended at Tuckerman st. and Georgia ave. nw.

Lewis was taking a woman patient from the air base, where he is a civilian driver, to Walter Reed Hospital during the espisode. He said that he understood the woman was an emergency case. Police testified she merely had been suffering from nausea before the drive, but suffered shock as a result of it.

Scoutcar Policemen Arthur E. Sweeney and W. E. Nolan testified the ambulance passed 13 red lights and stop signs, went on the wrong side of three streetcars, and failed, on a number of occasions, to give pedestrians the right of way.

Lewis contended he drove at less than 45 miles an hour. Judge Aubrey B. Fennell commented that he couldn't understand why police would have to chase five miles to apprehend a driver traveling at the rate Lewis claimed.

In Beallsville

Firemen Fete 'Speechless' Politicians

Montgomery County voters thought they'd witnessed a modern miracle last night when over 50 politicians for Federal, State and county posts gathered—and not one made a political speech.

The occasion was the annual firemen's carnival at Beallsville, considered the unofficial opening of the 1950 primary campaigns to be decided in September.

Most of the top contenders—both Democratic and Republican—were present, except Maryland's No. 1 office holder, Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., who was absent because of a "previous engagement."

His three chief rivals, Baltimore builder George P. Mahoney, and Herbert W. Larrabee of Glen Burnie, both Democrats, and Republican State Senator Roy Tasco Davis of Chevy Chase, were there.

"Ground rules" permitted only brief introductions and acknowledgements. Candidates remained practically speechless through a steak and French-fried potato meal in the firehouse and their short platform appearances on the fairgrounds next door.

More than 500 persons attended the gathering.

Among the candidates introduced were Representative J. Glenn Beall of Frostburg, incumbent Republican in the Sixth District, and his opponent, Maj. Gen. Russel P. Hartle, from Hagerstown, and William Prescott Allen, Bethesda publisher; John Marshall Butler, of Baltimore, Republican candidate for United States Senate, and Judge Charles W. Woodward, candidate to succeed himself as Circuit Court judge.

Others included Walter W. Dawson, incumbent State'ss Attorney, who filed yesterday for reelection, and his opponents, Alger Y. Barbee, trial magistrate of Forest Glen; Robert W. Beall, and Walter Moorman, both Bethesda lawyers.

Also, Joseph B. Simpson of Takoma Park, and DeWitt Hyde of Bethesda, both seeking Davis' vacated Senate post, and Clayton K. Watkins, Gaithersburg clerk of county court, up for reelection.

Forum Hears Prince Georges Rule Debated

Prince Georges County Democratic and Republican leaders knocked heads last night over the relative merits of the commissioner and manager types of county government. But neither group seemed to sway the other.

Two spokesmen for each party debated the question at the first open forum sponsored by the Citizens Committee for Good Government in Prince Georges County and held at the University of Maryland. About 250 persons attended.

Dr. Christian L. Larsen, director of the university's Bureau of Public Administration, acted as moderator.

The Republican platform, as stated by John F. Lillard, jr., candidate for the House of Delegates, proposes (1) the county manager system with administration "completely divorced" from policy-making, and (2) repeal of the Sothoron Act. The Sothoron Act prescribed a recoganization in the county government which took effect July 1.

County Attorney Jarrold V. Powers said the Democratic organization advocates the commissioner form with the administrator "directly responsible to the people."

The GOP's desire to place administration in the hands of an appointed official is an admission of the party's "inability to do the job," Powers said. "Fortunately, the Democrats do not feel that way.

John R. Fletcher, Republican State Central Committee chairman and candidate for State Senator contended the manager system is more democratic. A manager who proves inefficient can be discharged, he maintained, but an elected full-time commissioner charged with administration could not be removed except for malfeasance.

The fourth speaker, Democratic State Senator L. Harold Sothoron, declared the manager form tends to destroy the basic principles of the two-party system.

"This was demonstrated in Montgomery County," he asserted, "where attempts were made to repudiate the two-party system."

Restaurant Case Causes Long Session

Judge Thomas D. Quinn held Municipal Court sessions until 9:40 last night to speed disorderly conduct cases against four Negroes and 11 others arrested July 17 in Sholl's Cafeteria, 511 14th st. nw.

With the case nearing its close, Judge Quinn adjourned the extraordinary night session until 1:30 p. m. today.

The 15 defendants were placed under arrest during the hour they stood in the serving line and after they refused to leave unless all were sold luncheon.

Alfred A. McGarraghy, owner of Sholl's, testified that he refused to serve the mixed group because it was against the policy of the restaurant to serve Negroes. He said the defendants stood in such a manner that other customers could neither be served nor could they see the food offered for sale.

The defendants testified they came to the restaurant to "get something to eat" and for no other purpose. They denied blocking the path of any other persons, nor was the vision of the clientele blocked, the defendants said.

Earlier in the day, Judge Quinn ruled the Government had made out a prima facie case of disorderly conduct and that the defense must present its side.

Aberdeen, Md., July 26—(Spl.). Led by their commanding general, more than 1500 enlisted men, officers and civilians of the Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Ground began a mass donation of blood to the American Red Cross yesterday in one of the largest single blood collections in peacetime.

Maj. Gen. E. E. MacMorland, commanding general of the installation here, was the first blood donor to pass through the processing line set up by two Red Cross bloodmobile units at the station hospital.

A staff of 27 doctors, Red Cross nurses and technicians were on hand to receive prospective donors. To meet the need, the Red Cross dispatched bloodmobile units from Washington and Philadelphia. The Red Cross professional staff was aided by 78 volunteers recruited from the Officers Wives Club and the Better Halves Club, an organization of enlisted men's wives.

According to testimony, Rogers was found by chemical tests to have been intoxicated at the time of the accident.

The case was continued for two weeks to allow time for a probation office report prior to sentencing.

Zoning Awaits Master Plan, Lee Explains

Blair Lee 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, yesterday described as "silly" charges that the commission is holding up a revised Takoma Park zoning plan for "political" reasons.

The accusation was made Tuesday by Montgomery County Councilman J. Douglas Bradshaw during a meeting in Rockville.

Lee said the commission is holding off on work on the Takoma Park and other sectional zoning plans until a pending master plan for the county is completed.

He also urged the County Council to reverse its Tuesday decision to clamp down on rooming houses in suburban residential "A" neighborhoods. The new ordinance, he pointed out, will probably be less strict than the present law.

On the Takoma Park zoning plan, Lee said it would be "absurd" to issue a plan in terms of the present zoning laws "when those classifications are on the verge of total revision."

He said any claim that the commission is holding up the Takoma Park plan out of political consideration for occupants of rooming huses is "silly on the face of it."

"This commission does not intend to distort the proper and logical approach to any zoning or planning problem for political consideration," Lee said.

He added that the progress of good zoning in the county "would be greatly enhanced if Council man Bradshaw would cease interjecting a note of politics at every opportunity. Politics and zoning are poor bedfellows."

IN LOVING MEMORY OF OUR DEAR SON, EIL THORNTON, WHO PASSED AWAY ONE YEAR AGO TODAY, JULY 27, 1949.
We never thought when you left home that never would you return. The shock was hard, the pain severe, we never thought your death was near.
A happy life we once enjoyed, how sweet the memory still! But death has left a loneliness the world can never fill.
We think of you in silence, but no one can see us weep. Many silent tears are shed while others are asleep.
YOUR LOVING MOTHER, FATHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

Today's Lunchtime Conversation Geared to Yesterday's Memories

By Marie McNair

WITH THE luncheon hour these days, conversation is geared to war and the threat of war, taxes and controls.

It seemed like yesterday to a reminiscent group at luncheon the other day on the Shoreham veranda, talking of their experiences in World War II.

If war comes, Mrs. James Murray, daughter-in-law of the Senator from Montana, is one person who's ready for it. In California during the last war she took on a man-sized job as organizer and director of counseling service at Vega Aircraft, a division of Lockheed. There she supervised 62 women counselors for the more than 3600 women employes of the factory.

Helen Murray wasn't a 'desk man,' either. She used to put on slacks, bind her blonde hair in a bandana, slip into the required closed-heel-and-toe shoes and go down to the production floor. She would talk to the women, check with them and the counselors on working conditions and personal troubles, and give advice when asked.

She worked with the personnel division; enlarged the day nurseries for working mothers, set up additional ones and got volunteers from the Junior League to keep the service on a 24-hour basis.

Moreover, she arranged for lunch-hour fashion shows held in the out-door dining room, where the women were encouraged to buy sensibly and were shown how to look attractive even at a drilling machine.

Would she do it again? Just ask her. You bet she would!

Painted the Middle, Anyway

GRACE TULLY, author of "My Boss—F.D.R." chimed in with a story about her single venture in the portrait painting field. It was when she was in New York that the Urban League put on a benefit. They asked a number of well-known people to paint pictures to be auctioned off.

MISS TULLY

Miss Tully was one of those approached. So was Bob Sherwood, who does much better as an author and playwright.

"But I wouldn't have the slightest idea how to start," F.D.R.'s secretary remonstrated. "Never mind, go and see Mr. So-and So," was the response and Miss Tully did as she was told.

The upshot was a masterful painting of Falla, President Roosevelt's pet Scottie, which brought $60 at the sale. What the purchaser doesn't know is that Mr. So-and-So drew the likeness, Miss Tully filling it in with the brush.

Mrs. Sherwood, as a loving wife, kept pushing the price up on her husband's portrait, finally got stuck with it. "It was a price I could hardly afford," was the Sherwood retort.

Minister Mesta, our envoy to Luxembourg, is to get a decoration, with appropriate ceremonies at the legation on July 31. Mrs. Mesta will receive the Gold Medal of the American Legion from the Paris Post No. 1 in recognition of her hospitality to American servicemen in the European area. Perle Mesta has kept open house for the GI's ever since she landed in Luxembourg. Her last big party was July 1 when she entertained something like 800 guests, largely our boys in the service.

Continue Round of Parties

MISS BEVERLY FARRINGTON and Major Hugh Richardson, continuing in a round of parties before their marriage August 12, were guests of honor at a dinner party last night given by Mr. and Mrs. William Ewing of Bethesda.

Beverly's parents, the Delegate from Hawaii and Mrs. Farrington were there, and others included Mr. and Mrs. Blake Clark, Miss Annie Laurie Richardson, and Ray Wills.

Major Richardson's brother aides at the White House, Capt. Robert S. Rivers and Capt. James Sullivan, who are also his roommates, will entertain at cocktails for the engaged couple on August 6 and more parties for Bev and Hugh are piling up every day. Incidentally, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja's buffet supper, originally scheduled for August 3, has been postponed until the 9th, a better spot on a crowded calendar.

Liberia Celebrates Anniversary

LIBERIA celebrated its 103rd anniversary of independence yesterday at an evening reception held at the Embassy at 8 o'clock. The Charge d'Affaires, Richard S. B. Bright, and Mrs. Bright received, assisted by the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of Liberia, James B. Dennis, who is making a short visit in Washington.

A large marquee was set up on the lawn of the Embassy, where a buffet supper was served. Flowers in blue, red, and white, colors of Liberia, were placed in vases around the Embassy.

Your Figure, Madame

'Out of Sight, Out of Mind' Applies to Dinner Table

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S easier to cut down the quantity of food in summer, and if the quality is carefully chosen, summer fare can really be light. So this seems an excellent time to answer the question . . .

IDA JEAN KAIN

"I have heard it said that if one leaves the dinner table while still a bit hungry, the hunger will be forgotten in 15 minutes. I find to my amazement that this is true, and I would like to know why."

It most certainly is true It is partly psychological and partly satisfaction Here the old saying "out of sight, out of mind" applies. Once away from the table and out of the sight of food, the temptation is gone.

There is no doubt whatever that the sight of a luscious-looking dessert can whet the appetite . . . sight is one of the senses that stimulate appetite. Smell is another appetite-tingling sense . . . for example, the smell of a piece of freshly baked apple pie!

But fortunately, once away from the table—out of the dining room at home or away from the restaurant if dining out—your senses are no longer tantalized, and your mind becomes occupied with other things.

It's easy to see that you will not be tempted to eat more food when you feel perfectly satisfied. But while you are at the table eating, your mind is on food. You are feeding your taste instead of your need . . . food still tastes good, and the temptation is to keep on eating.

Summer is an excellent time to break that fattening habit and to practice getting up from the table not quite full. It gets easier for the simple reason that the stomach shrinks, and this actually lessens your food capacity. Practice that good habit this summer, and by fall you will not want as much food.

Try it at dinner tonight. Get up from the table just short of full . . . 15 minutes later you wouldn't give 15 cents for the most tempting dessert. You will feel perfectly satisfied . . . and you'll be slimming.

No Two Scales Alike

Figures Do Lie, This Diet Fan Hopes

By Norma Lanum

THE bus driver this morning cheerfully inquired if I'd lost any weight. I uttered an indistinguishable sound, dropped my token in the slot and moved as far back in the bus as I could get.

It's not that I object to personal questions in the morning, or even on a public conveyance, for that matter. My objection is that folks shouldn't have to ask if I'm thinner. It ought to show by this time, don't you think?

If this keeps up, I'll have to weigh myself. No, I haven't been on a scale since last week when a drug store machine weighed me at 130 pounds. That was just a week after I started this Ida Jean Kain diet at the weight of 128 pounds. So I knew that scale was wrong.

10 Pounds Seems A Little Light

THEN I dropped a penny in the scale on the street corner. After the scale rumbled and jerked and clanged the weight indicator moved up to 10 pounds. Realizing this, too, was wrong, I gave up scales until the diet's over. Then I'll return to the YWCA to weigh on the same machine I used before launching my reducing campaign.

For the time being, I've turned to the tape measure. Instead of rushing to a scale after every meal, I just unravel my measuring tape. (It's always in my purse.) For example, my breakfast this morning just put ¼ inch around my middle. But by lunch time I ought to be down to 26 inches again, or maybe even 25¾. I've gotten down that low before. That was in the morning, however, just after the exercises and before breakfast.

Measuring myself at night is very discouraging. I usually find myself with the 27-inch waist and 39-inch hips that I started out with.

Mrs. Edward Treglown, who no doubt will be acclaimed soon as Washington's best dieter, has run into the same trouble on scales that I did. But she hasn't given up yet. "I jus tcan't resist those fortunes," she confesses. Ruth Treglown's weight, as determined on various scales throughout the city, varies as much as 12 pounds from day to day.

"I don't pay any attention to that, though. I'm sure I've lost at least 8 pounds already," she reports confidently.

She does admit, however, that her friends haven't yet noticed the difference in her size, "in fact, the only one who seems sincerely interested in my progress is the grocer. I have to give him all the statistics each morning when I buy my parsley, rye wafers, buttermilk and broccoli."

So, for the benefit of friendly bus drivers and grocers, Ruth and I announce that we're sure we're losing weight. But heaven only knows how much.

True Glory

Some people wonder if their lives . . . Are fruitful as can be . . . And if their work and income have . . . Sufficient dignity . . . They fear that their appearance may . . . From wealth or fame or anything . . . That has to do with them . . . It is sincerity that counts . . . And whether people try . . . To do some good for others and . . . To help the passer-by . . . You Won't Be a Mystery Woman to the Man Who Has Sisters

Fifth of 17 articles.

By Cora Carlyle

THE Man With the Sisters is a type of man to whom the mysteries of the female mind and body are an open and familiar book. He is at ease with women and thoroughly enjoys their company. He's accustomed to the intimate details of sis's dates, sis's quarrels and love fests with the boy friend, sis's job and sis's exhausting search for a bargain. The females of his household love and adore him and he has paid and paid with a tireless ear.

Long accustomed to the importance of a frill on a new dress and the anguish caused by smudged nail polish, he'll sympathize with your worries about the possible success of a new Easter outfit and he'll admire the new shade of polish on your nails. He may even ask, "Is it 'Mrs. Miniver's Rose' or 'Bright Forecast.'?"

He'll be perfectly willing to share with you the pleasure of picking out a new hat and his suggestions as to what will do or not do for you are based on great experience. For years, he's been a guinea pig for a man's reaction to a hat.

To the kind of female conversation that bores most men, he will lend not only a receptive ear but also become an active participant. He will enjoy catty remarks about the other women in a restaurant or devastating comments as they pass you on the street.

He is not bewildered as most men are by an indefatigable search for a pocketbook or for the exact color of a pair of shoes. His sisters and mother since early childhood have initiated him into the arts of dress, make-up and general domesticity.

In the debit side of the ledger, you'll find him far more critical and aware of any sartorial defect in your make-up than the man who didn't live with females all his life. He'll recognize the black, basic dress despite the added frilly lingerie or the decorative apron as the one you had on many times. And in the back of his mind, he will always compare you to his sisters and to the standards they've established for themselves.

These standards may be good or bad but The Man With the Sisters usually idealizes the females of his family. Closeness and affection have dimmed his critical faculties and he looks at them through sympathetic and loving eyes. His continuous praise of their beauty and glamour will make you feel that such fair creatures couldn't exist on this earth.

As this man loves women, it isn't too difficult to replace not only mama but the sisters, too. Your cue lies in supplanting the whole female menage. Be mother,sister and wife to him!

The Intellectual

THE Intellectual is the bright child who usually travels in groups. Since he's read his first printed word, ideas have given him real sustenance and have been the sacred cow of his existence ever since. Without talk, conversation or argument, life loses its sparkle because he can find no substitute for his favorite outdoor and indoor sport.

Unlike his cousin, the scientist, his interests lie in music, art and politics, and it is the more advanced and more leftist segments of these fields that attract him. In art, it is the abstractionists and surrealists whom he regards as the vanguard of true art. Picasso has already become an old master. He will dismiss the paintings of Botticelli with a sneering reference to the similarities between them and photographs.

Dialectical materialism and Man's struggle to realize himself are what keep him up until the wee hours of the morning. If you possess the physical stamina to cope with the liveliness of his mind, you're on the way to being In.

As this bright child craves an audience and is rarely alone, it will be necessary to command the respect of his friends. The prospect of a group of intellectuals needn't frighten you because they all think more or less alike. Once you find the particular spheres of his interest, it's easy going to get the proper background.

The intellectual is no original thinker and some reading from the books of his authorities will give you the confidence to join the discussion. Invite the group to your home and let them tear themselves apart in lively arguments while you serve the drinks to wet the lips that wage the battles of the mind. You won't be wasting time by any standards, if you go to concerts, visit art galleries or attend lectures and forums with him.

Dick and Don

WE now swing your attention to the sons of Bacchus whom we call Dick and Don, the Dips. Dick, the Dip, is the man who pretends to have had one drink too many. Actually, he hasn't had more than he can hold, but he uses his liquor as an excuse to behave in a way which, in his "sober" moments, he wouldn't dare. Pretending to be drunk, he unloosens his more caddish side. He'll say, "I'm high," and then proceed to tell a risque story. If his wrists aren't slapped, he'll be encouraged to go on to bolder and bolder stories. In a way, he is testing your receptivity as to how far he can go.

The only technique with this type of man is . . . don't let him get away with the first unseemly remark or act. After the first rebuff, he will undoubtedly make the excuse that it wasn't he but that old debbil likker that was the villain. Once he realizes that he can't get away with anything by pretending to be drunk, he'll give in and be his real self.

Don can be managed without too much trouble because the routine of how he behaves when drunk varies very little. Once you learn the various stages, you can handle them with common sense home remedies. When you go out with Don, he will give you and everyone else in hearing range the impression that, he's Mr. Big Shot. He tries to demonstrate this by ordering waiters around in a loud and belligerent voice. After his second or third drink, he is host to practically everyone in the room and his insistence to everyone about having a little drink is the monotonous tune he sings. Should you attempt to quiet him, he will probably look at you with crocodile tears and woebegone expression. He is entering into the nobody-understands-or-loves-me stage.

A sympathetic remark from you may elicit one of two reactions; he may become sentimental and tell you you're the most wonderful girl in the world. Or else he may become more deeply plunged into a self-pitying mood. With a look of a martyr, he may groan out that you really don't understand him; that if you did, you would think he was a right guy; that he's no good—a dog—you're too good for him and if he had any character, he'd kill himself.

At this point, no amount of reasoning will do any good as he's reached the double talk stage. The best procedure is to soothe him by agreeing with everything he says.

Don is a common type of tippler whose drinking must not be taken too seriously. This kind of behavior is usually an expression of youth's desire to cut loose. In a sense, it is a kind of growing pain and should be considered in the proper perspective.

Actually, there is no need to behave as if the world is coming to an end. The difficulties of the situation can best be handled by trying to kid him out of it. The spectacle which this man makes of himself is not an everyday occurrence. Sometimes it comes out of his need to escape from what is bubbling inside of him. This type of drinker has more nuisance value than anything else. . . .

The Divorced Man

THE DIVORCED MAN who has been legally returned to the status of a single man falls into two categories. He may feel as happy and gay as a lark, or he may feel as forlorn and deserted as the trees look in winter. The man who regards his divorce paper a birth certificate is raring to go. He feels that he's been through a long given a new leaose on life.

This fellow may prove a bit elusive to lead to the altar until he's had time to run himself ragged. For a little while he behaves like the anxious child at the circus who wants everything at once and eat all the peanuts and popcorn. Time and age will quench the fires of his desires. Like the widower who had an unfortunate marriage, the divorced man may also want to prove he's capable of a happy relationship with a woman. He may also miss the physical comforts he once enjoyed.

On the other hand the man who feels that his divorce paper is his death warrant is ready to cry in any woman's lap. Whatever caused his wife to divorce him, he's convinced that it wasn't his fault. Before you've had a chance to order a cocktail, he will tell you all—that he did everything in the world to please her—that nothing was too good for her—and that he'll never understand why it didn't work out.

Before you undertake marriage with either type, consideration must be given to his financial obligations to his former wife. In most cases of divorce, the law grants alimony to the wife. At this point you may not deny any girl's right to protection. Fine if you appreciate how very burdensome it is when each week a good bit is taken out of your husband's pay check to support his former wife. Unless you are willing to share gracefully the burden which the law has imposed upon your future husband, don't marry a diveorcee.

As for the divorced man with the children, the problem is comparatively easy. This time the law has eased your difficulties because it usually allows the custody of the children to the mother. But for those periods of time when the children visit their father, you must be willing to accept them with open arms.

The Artist

MILFORD, the artist, is the type of man who lives to express himself. Whether its music, painting or literature, he humbly prostrates himself at the the feet of his muse. No sacrifice is too great to woo his goddess and he's perfectly willing to sacrifice you too.

The great american novel lies in him if only he can suffer enough to get it out. Or he feels that he can create musical scores such as the world has never heard if only he could release it. He'll starve himself to buy new oils to splatter on canvasses. He'll tirelessly dissect your every emotion if you in any way resemble a character which is in his new opus.

This type of man if oftimes a dreamer and lives in an imaginary world. He may or may not be the genius he thinks he is but in any case, you've got to be the practical one in this partnership. A bread basket may make a beautiful still life but dreams won't fill it. For the girl who is willing to assume the practical and financial end of a marriage, this fellwo has many compensations. He's usually an interesting companion and will be duly appreciative, if you take care of him so he can give his all for is art. And there is always that chance in a million that your husband will be one of the world's outstanding men.

Man-on-Rebound

THE man-on-the-rebound can be any type because his reactions are true to them all. He's been hurt—he doesn't know what to do about it—he just can't believe that it could happen to him—that a woman could reject him. Like a lost child, yelling for his mother, he's crying for salve to heal his wounds.

'If you happen to meet any type of man who is in this state, you don't have to be a policeman to show him the way home. It's easier than taking candy from a baby—a little sympathy —a kind word—and your work is done. He's yours.

But before we end our classifications, we want to make a few general statements about the man who is no longer in his first youth. If he is not a widower or divorced, the man over 35 offers many more difficulties than the younger man of any given type. His years are a silent witness to his deep-seated resistance to marriage and also to the deep grooves his habits have plowed. We warn you not to expect that he will respond as quickly to our suggested techniques as the younger man. But don't let this deter you.

Whether the older man lives with his family or is on his own, he has become a creature of habit. His routine is more set than your finger wave before the pins are removed. His social program for the week was prepared ten years ago, but he still follows it.

On the practical side, this bachelor will realistically point out that two cannot live as cheaply as one. Bowl him over by agreeing with him. Of course, two can't live as cheaply as one but this excuse is merely a cover-up for some basic resistance to take the step to the altar. Men have married whether they've earned $25 or $250 a week. It's not the cents but the senses which stop this methodical fellow. In spite of this, never under-estimate his need of you—the two-legged creature really can't get along without you. Where else can he go for his pleasure, his amusement?

Despite the fact that the years have made him wary and suspicious, we know of instance after instance where men over 35 have married. You won't be swept off your feet by his ardor but there are advantages to slow-burning fires. If you can win the prize of this vintage, he will be fully matured. Older men bring to the marriage relationship the mellowness and full flavor of an old wine.

Despite his set ways, the compensations are many. There is nothing risky about the man over 35. His position in society is fairly well established and you won't be getting a surprise package.

Wedding Day Isn't All Bliss, Contest Shows

Because he dropped the wedding ring in the hot air register of the church during his wedding ceremony, Robert Williams of Arlington, Va. is slated to receive $200 worth of merchandise from the Hecht Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams' tale of detaching the elbow pipe in the basement and covering the entire wedding party with soot won them first prize in the Hecht Co.—Loew's Palace "Most Amusing Wedding Day" contest.

Mrs. Anne Harris of Washington was awarded second prize of $100 in merchandise because her wedding reception was thrown into a panic by a snake rearing its head on the reception table. Mrs. Harris' family had decorated her home with golden-rod and the snake was nestled in the centerpiece. Mr. Harris emerged a hero by killing the snake.

Their prize of $50 in merchandise was won by Mr. and Mrs. Lee Risdoh of Chevy Chase, Md.. Mrs. Risdon said her feet were killing her on her wedding day so she slipped into a pair of bedroom slippers to wear to the church. It was not until the minister intoned "let us kneel and pray" that Mrs. Risden discovered she had forgotten to substitue shoes for her slippers.

Retailers Gird To Help U. S. Controls Plan

By S. Oliver Goodman

The nation's retailers have set up machinery to help the Government on proposed merchandise controls.

At a luncheon meeting here the Retail Planning Committee, representing more than 500,000 retail stores, named 'task' committees to study various aspects of proposed controls with special reference to their effect on distribution and consumers.

"With adequate inventories of consumer merchandise on hand, retailers are concerned with long range programs rather than immediate ones," said Maury Nee, president of the National Retail Furniture Association, who presided at the session Tuesday. Nee, a Washingtonian, was elected chairman of the Retail Planning Committee.

The task committees, Nee revealed, will complete studies of various facets of Truman's proposals, such as allocations, priorities and control of consumer credits as their first assignment. These studies and advice will be made available to the Secretary of Commerce, in addition to retail leaders.

Merchandise availability for consumers is not a general problem now, Nee emphasized, but retailers are moving to eliminate whatever inequities might occur from a long-range viewpoint as the defense program develops.

Nelson Miller, chief of the marketing division of the Commerce Department, attended the retailers meeting and stressed the reliance of the Commerce Department on retail experience and know-how in shaping plans affecting the retail industry.

SCRAMBLE: The Iron Age, trade weekly, described the steel market today as "a whirlpool of frenzy and uncertainty" resulting from what it called slow-motion probing by the Administration for "painless" controls. "There are plenty of takers for anything that looks like steel, and price consciousness is fading fast," the publication reported. Pointing out that the manufacturer "has not been provided with rules governing the procurement battle," the Iron Age said that "this has turned the race for steel into a mad scramble, with no holds barred."

ODD LOTS: Ferris & Co. Washington investment house, has prepared an analysis of how a war economy will affect common stocks in major industries. . . . Chrysler Corp. has been rolling out more than 42,500 cars and trucks weekly in the effort to make up strike-lost volume. . . . OVER THE TOP: A last-week spurt added $2,308,614 in E bond sales and brought the Independence Drive over the top in Washington, it was pointed out yesterday by Edward C. Baltz, chairman of the D. C. Savings Bond Division. The July 9-17 report boosted lagging E bond sales to $9,382,336 or 125.1 per cent of the 7½ - million - dollar quota. 'How to Stop Killing Yourself'

On Vacation, Pack Reason, Too

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of a series of six articles describing how so many of us are unconsciously killing ourselves. The series is a condensation of the book, "How To Stop Killing Yourself" just published by Wilfred Funk, Inc. Dr. Steincrohn is a specialist in internal medicine with 25 years practice.

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M. D.

CHAPTER FIVE

I suppose I am prejudiced, and my opinions are untimely and in poor taste, when I say that too many people kill themselves (without knowing it) while on vacation.

Again it is the slow variety of suicide. Vacation means change; and for some persons this is a signal to throw all reason overboard.

For 50 weeks of the year they are mild, conforming citizens who eat sparingly and on time; who take an occasional nip, smoke moderately, and feel done in if they can't have their eight or nine hours' rest at night. Then for two weeks they break all the rules.

Suppose, for example, that my week of fishing in a Maine lake is up today. I am a rank amateur. My guide fixes the tackle, steers the canoe, picks the salmon holes.

If I have a strike today (I have been out six hours and no luck so far), he probably will do the major part of landing the fish. During this week I haven't caught any "keepers." The one fish I caught was thrown back—bass season doesn't begin until next week.

Now here is what all this autobiographical data is about. If I don't catch another fish-today, next year, or 10 years from now, it will be all right with me.

I am just philosophical enough to let a fish live his life without becoming upset about it.

But consider my friend in the next cottage. He has been preparing for this trip for months. He has spent hours picking out fancy tackle, his new rod is a beauty, and he has fortified himself with the theory of fishing.

Although he has fished for 40 years, he cannot concede that occasionally a fish can outsmart a fisherman. He, too, has only caught one bass in an entire week of fishing. This has automatically dumped him into my class—that of a duffer.

As if that were not bad enough, he is the butt of the three others in the party, who know his sensitive spot. The four of us have had a delightful time. But he has cussed and fumed and promised to throw his rod to the fish if he doesn't have more luck. He is "killing himself on his vacation."

"Killing yourself on vacation" may be a strong term. Perhaps it should be applied only to those cases in which unusually strenuous exertion has taken the life of the vacationer. However, there are other milder ways of going about killing ourselves.

For example, take our friend the fisherman. He has looked forward to this fishing trip for months. Yet the unsuccessful week of fishing has added bitters to his barrel of honey. He has undone all the fun of his anticipation. As he expressed it, "I've killed a week."

Is it putting it too strongly to say that he has killed a bit of himself this week? What should have been a time of relaxation and enjoyment has become for him a stew of frustration, unhappiness, and bewilderment. Senseless? Of course. But such reactions are not rare.

Most persons who kill themselves a little on vacations do so because they have planned their vacations carelessly. How often have you returned to work, unrested in mind and body—and completely disillusioned about the value of vacations? It is quite depressing to spoil a vacation after you have looked forward to it for 50 weeks.

Some persons go to the shore year after year, who admit that they dislike the water and the beach. They kill a little of themselves each year—by force of habit or self-destruction, call it what you will. Others go to the mountains who hanker for the shore. Some go north in the winter, yet hate the cold; others go south in the winter who like to ski and skate.

Vacation Time Is Valuable

Time is too valuable to throw away so haphazardly. Vacation time is renewal time. For most of us, it is unnaturally short. Ideally, the man or woman who works hard should have a two weeks' vacation after every 10 weeks of work. This is, of course, something to look forward to in the millenium; nevertheless, physiologically and economically, it is a rational and sensible regime.

Unfortunately, the person who needs the vacation most has probably only one week, perhaps two, a year. Like the hungry man who gulps down a large meal and gets indigestion, our man with one week's vacation has made up his mind to get the most out of it.

The result: he often gets vacationitis. You might call this a disease due to trying to cram a monthful of activity into a short week.

I have seen men play a 36 hole mountain course in a driving rain simply because they have only one week's vacation—and want to get in their golf.

Regard Relaxation As Wasted

They have become bedraggled, wet, and some have actually become sick. Nevertheless, they would have thought their vacation a failure if they had accepted the rain and just sat around talking, reading, or doing nothing in particular.

A good formula to follow is this: Do the things on your vacation that you don't do back home during the other 50 weeks.

For example: If you play golf two or three times a week at home, it would be smart not to take your clubs with you. If your relaxation during weekends at home is fishing in small streams, then leave your fishing rod at home and take golf clubs.

If you read a book a week, take no books with you and resolve not to read while you are away. If you are a soap-opera addict, resolve not to turn on the radio while on vacation.

If you are a doctor, play your golf with lawyers. If you are a lawyer, do your fishing with doctors.

"A Partial Retirement"

Think of vacation as partial retirement. If your year is a lifetime, two weeks of vacation compensates and renews you for hard work. A vacation is something which you have earned; you deserve to enjoy it thoroughly rather than to return from it disappointed and depressed.

Vacation time is renewal time. It is not action time. It is not necessary that every waking moment be filled with physical activity. It is not necessary that sleep, night after night, be limited to four and five hours so that you can get up early enough to catch those fish.

Every doctor sees the post-vacation casualties—the partial suicides. Of course, many have good times; but too often in answer to the question "Did you have a nice time?" the answer is given in a half-hearted way, "Well, it was so-so. I wish I had a chance to take it over again. I know what I'd like to do, but I guess it'll have to wait until next year."

Foolish, isn't it, to have to describe that precious two weeks' vacation with words of such faint praise?

High-Wire Legends

Ted's Tall Stories Have Real Altitude

By John Crosby

"CROSSROADS," a sustaining program on ABC (10 p. m. EDT Mondays), contains the germ of a finei idea, if I understand it correctly. On this one, Ted Malone, ABC's man of all work, acts as narrator of a series of dramas theoretically written around Malone's travels in, as they say in the press release, "exotic" lands, which is a euphemism for countries farther away than Canada.

Crosby

Actually, they are free-hand dramatizations of legends which can be picked up in any country, including this one. I have a pronounced weakness for legends simply because they have to be pretty good stories to survive long enough to become legends. Malone's legends—some good, some rather routine—have this common property. They had to be pretty good yarns to start out with or they wouldn't have lasted so long or traveled so far.

Some time ago, for example, Malone told the story, apparently a pretty well known one, about Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique," which appears to lay a curse on every musician who plays it in Stockholm. At any rate, a number of conductors and instrumentalists died either violent or strange deaths after playing it or while they were playing it in Stockholm.

Several of the unfortunate musicians met their ends at the hands of a maniac who connected the symphony with the death of his wife. Other deaths were just plain mysterious. A Swedish police sergeant devoted some 18 years to the case, and the closest he ever got to the maniacal killer was a nightmarish chase through the catwalks high above the concert stage, a chase that reminded me strongly of the end of "The Phantom Of The Opera." Ultimately, the detective himself turns up strangely dead on the beach at Antibes.

The Fruitful Tanbark

THE authors frankly admit they fictionalize these stories a bit, so I can't tell where fact ends and fancy begins. But then you never can tell truth from fiction in any legend. It acquires substance as it rolls along.

Another of Mr. Malone's stories dealt with rivalry between a couple of high-wire artists in a circus and, brother, what a place for legend that is.

I was particularly entranced by the circus story because there were no shadings of good or evil, no psychological explanations, no modern moonshine of any sort. The villain was quite frankly a villain. He was mean, vain, arrogant and crooked. He tried to murder his rival, to seduce his rival's wife and to steal the circus. Probably set fire to his mother in his spare time. Not a good quality in him. Wonderful villain. Haven't met one like that in years.

The hero and heroine, on the other hand, were a young couple of monstrous virtue unhappily transfixed by circumstances beyond their control. They triumphed, though, over unspeakable odds. The two rivals staged a duel on the high wire. Real swords. No net. Guess who won?

Mr. Malone has a weakness for getting his characters 100 feet in the air as thousands gasp in the seats below. I shouldn't be at all surprised if he staged a dogfight in airplanes over the Yale Bowl next.

Nightingale on Tap

I'VE BEEN prowling through the English newspapers again to see what our British cousins are up to in the broadcasting dodge, and I came across the report of a radio concert given by Mr. Percy Edwards which I thought I'd pass along. "The line in which he (Mr. Edwards) specializes," writes W. E. Williams in the Observer of London, "is mimicry of birds and animals, an accomplishment he displays in imaginary excursions into the country. On these journeys he conjures up a charming rural panorama by imitating the gurgle of a turbulent stream and the myriad sounds of wildlife that inhabit the scene."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Think You Can Supply a Better Definition?

George G. Jaffe of 7619 9th st. nw., wonders how many District Liners react to this coumn by "a series of inarticulate, explosive sounds due to the characteristic vibrations into which the vocal chords are thrown by the jerky, spasmodic character of the expirations." (That's the Funk & Wagnalls definition of the verb "to laugh.")

JAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I was driving south on Connecticut ave., via the underpass, and wanted to get to the 1700 block of N st. nw.

But I found a "No Left Turn" sign at N st., a "No U Turn" sign further down, and N st. is one-way eastbound in the 1700 block.

How was I supposed to get there?

Col. Breckinridge A. Day
2801 31st st. nw.

Dear Colonel Day:

You can't get there from here.

Leave town, approach Washington from the south, and turn right at N st.

Better yet, park your car and take a cab. I never met a hacker who let traffic signs intimidate him.

Bill

HE DIDN'T MEAN IT THAT WAY

I picked up some Kodacolor prints at the Robbins Camera shop the other day. As I opened the package, the first thing I saw was a striking portrait of my wife.

"Ah," I said to Lou Robbins, "I could fall in love with a girl like that."

"Wonderful," exclaimed Lou, admiring my photographic technique instead of the girl.

In the next snapshot, I had caught her laughing. "Here's another pip," I said.

"Hey," protested Lou, "that's your wife."

"Of course it is, you dunce. So is the first one I showed you."

"Oh," he murmured, "I didn't recognize her in the one where she had her mouth shut."

MISCELLANY

Teen-aged golfers at Manor Club wonder why the grownups won't let them have handicaps . . . Mrs. Robert Levy of 532 20th st. nw. says she'd be more inclined to agree with Dick Coe's view that there are lots of good movies if so many of them didn't have "screamy musical accompaniments" . . . The lads in the Mark Powell's Boys Club play their annual baseball game against their fathers at 3 p. m. Sunday at Glencarlyn Playground, Lee blvd. and Carlyn Spring rd., for the benefit of Arlington County School Safety Patrol (admission 25 cents). County Board Members Dan Dugan, Al Frisbie and Bob Cox will serve as umpires. Last year, the kids beat their dads, 7 to 6, and raised a whopping $300 for the Patrol . . . Funniest report on the police radio this week: "A larceny at the Department of Justice" . . . Maj. Charles S. Coulter of 4212 37th st. nw., who listens to European broadcasts on his short-wave set, reports that the latest propaganda line from the Commies is that Punch, of Punch & Judy fame, is a "liar, scoundrel and ruffian," and that his character will be improved in a forthcoming Russian version of the classic . . . Henry Willard, the real estate man, forwards an attested scorecard from Nantucket Golf Course to prove that his vacation has sharpened up his game. The card includes a proud "2," circled in red . . . Parents forming a cooperative school for children retarded for mental or physical reasons will meet in the Peabody Room of the Georgetown Library, Wisconsin ave. and R st. nw., at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday . . . Stuart Finley, who has been ribbing me on his WRC "Capital Scrapbook" program, is one of the few men in town who has had years of experience at that pastime. We both worked for the Cincinnati Post's radio station as far back as 1937 . . . Madcap Mike Hunnicutt, now a star here, worked for our hated rival, so we refused to listen to him, except daily.

GIVE-AWAYS

ADD SIGNS

Leon Shimkin of International News Service did a double take at the Circle Theater's recent marquee sign:

"'Caged' with Jean Parker."

HE CAN'T MISS

Every time I see the guy, he's selling something different. When I ran into him the other day, I thought I'd kid him about it.

"What are you peddling now?" I began.

"Right now," he said soberly, "I've got the two best lines in America. I'm selling insurance against atomic bombs, and shares in a plutonium mine."

Massachusetts Court Rules Novel Obscene

Boston, July 26 (U.P.).—The novel "God's Little Acre" by Erskine Caldwell was ruled obscene today by the full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

The court said the "book abounds in sexual episodes and some are portrayed with an abundance of realistic details."

The decision reversed a decision of Superior Court Judge Charles S. Fairhurst who ruled in favor of the book.

Young American Medal Bill Passed by Senate

The Senate approved a bill yesterday creating the Young American Medal for bravery. The measure, already passed by the House, now goes to President Truman.

The Department of Justice would award the medal to young Americans who risked their lives to save others.

Merry-Go-Round

FBI Chief Urged as CIA Head

By Drew Pearson

It isn't generally known, but Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter, chief of the super-duper spy agency, central intelligence, had asked for sea duty well before the Korean outbreak.

Hillenkoetter

The Admiral has done a better job of foreign intelligence than Congress gives him credit for, but he has never been particularly happy in the job and would like to get back to a battleship. Hillenkoetter was former commander of the battleship Missouri, comes from the State of Missouri, and was picked by Truman personally for the difficult intelligence assignment.

Faced with the admiral's insistence that he wants to be transferred, President Truman has asked Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former United States Ambassador to Moscow, to take over central intelligence. Smith, so far, has refused, on the ground that he recently underwent an ulcer operation.

General Smith knows the Russians, and would be better than most military men for this assignment. However, Congress, in creating central intelligence, did not intend that it be run by the military.

Therefore, some of the President's friends are urging that he appoint J. Edgar Hoover to this important post.

Hoover is one of the best organizers in Government, has built up one of the best-trained investigation bureaus the world has ever seen, and has it in such good shape that it could operate under a new director.

On the other hand, getting intelligence on a prospective enemy is all-important in this day when a suitcase smuggled into an American harbor, or the flight of one plane across the Arctic, or the secret massing of troops on a certain border could cripple the United States indefinitely.

That is why a man of Hoover's genius ought to be used to head an agency which today has become even more important than the FBI.

More on Wire-Tapping

Interesting new evidence gradually accumulates in the Justice Department's belated probe of Senator Brewster's eavesdropping on Howard Hughes, the West Coast aviation mogul.

It will be recalled that three years ago when the GOP Senator from Maine was chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, he staged a head-line snatching investigation of the rather far-fetched charge that Hughes had spent Government money extravagantly in building a giant amphibious transport plane.

It turned out, however, that Brewster had something of an ax to grind for his good friends of Pan-American World Airways, and had talked to Hughes earlier about an amalgamation between Pan-Am and his Trans World Airlines.

It also turned out, two years later, that Brewster had used Lieut. Joseph Shimon of the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia to tap Howard Hughes' phone and put a microphone in his room. In fact, police Chief Robert Barrett submitted a report to the Justice Department almost one year ago that Shimon, had been tapping wires for Senator Brewster's investigating committee.

Wire-tapping, of course, is barred by section 603 of the Federal Communications Act and is a criminal offense.

Statement by Shimon

The Justice Department, after nine months, finally got around to ordering an FBI investigation. The most interesting thing the FBI has turned up a statement made to a G-man by Lieutenant Shimon that Senator Brewster's secretary paid him for his wire-tapping.

A close friend of Brewster's, William Power Maloney, has been retained as defense counsel for Lieutenant Shimon. Upon Shimon's testimony depends whether or not Senator Brewster becomes involved in a criminal proceeding.

So far, Shimon has stuck to a very careful story. He admits tapping Howard Hughes' phone, but he does not admit giving any information about the wire-tapping to the Senator. This is aimed to let Brewster off the hook.

The Senator from Maine, in turn, has figured out an interesting excuse for his association with the police lieutenant. Friends were worried over threats of physical violence, he says, so Shimon was hired to protect him. In the course of protecting him, the police lieutenant tapped the wire of Howard Hughes—the last person, incidentally, who would have attacked Brewster physically.

THE "TWICE-TUFTED," LASTEX BACKED

9x12 Room Size Carpet

We admit it. We eavesdropped. Then we "talked." We told the people at Barwick (one of America's largest rug makers) the kind of rug we heard you young married people were wishing for. And they made it . . . new, new Decorite. It comes room-size . . . (no bare floors for you, you said). It's the thickest, softest, closest-woven cotton rug we've seen at any price . . . (like a velvety lawn, you mused). Decorite is "twice-tufted" . . . with over 13,000 tufts squeezed into every square foot. You can wash this new, new cotton carpet, vacuum clean it, without dimming its sparkling beauty . . . (no bother to clean, you hoped). You could stage a parade without crushing the spring loops . . . (long-wearing, you insisted). Decorite is lastex backed to hug the floor . . . (no skidding, no curling edges, you said). It's the very rug you wished for, clear down to the budget-wise price . . . at Half Yearly Sale savings.
